Montgomery, Short $1,000, Indicts Four County Aides

Advises Dismissal Of County Auditor

Asks Police Action in Fraud Cases, Blood Tests for Drivers.

Two officials of Montgomery County, Md., and two others who recently resigned were indicted last night by the grand jury, in session in Rockville.

They are E. J. Gray, of Edgemoor, until two weeks ago building inspector; P. Ray Souder, of Damascus, supervisor of county aid; Payton Mannar, of Potomac, former manager of the Bethesda liquor dispensary, and Gerald Warthen, of Kensington, building inspector, who was Gray's aid until the latter resigned.

The grand jury also recommended the immediate dismissal of "the incumbent in the office of accountant or auditor."

Asks Sweeping Changes.

Although he was not named in the grand jury's report, the present incumbent is C. Vaughan Darby.

The grand jury made sweeping recommendations for general improvement in law enforcement in the county, as follows:

That all clerks and employes handling public funds be properly bonded.

That the office of supervisor of county aid be abolished and its activities transferred to the welfare board.

That the liquor-control board be abolished, and its duties taken over by the county commissioners.

That a firm of certified public accountants be employed to install an "adequate and complete and modern system of accounting" for the liquor-control board and the employment of a purchasing agent for the county.

Embezzlement Charged.

Gray was indicted on 26 counts. The first 24 indictments alleged embezzlement of small sums, which reached a total of $244. The twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth indictments were blanket indictments — the twenty-fifth charging the embezzlements alleged to have been committed in the first 24 cases and the twenty-sixth charging embezzlement of the total.

Souder was indicted for embezzlement of $31.25. This is said to have been a check a woman sent for the care of her husband, who is insane.

Mannar was indicted for embezzlement of $188.85. He resigned from his job about three weeks ago.

Appointed by Fusionists.

All the indicted officials were put in office by Fusion commissioners. Gay is a real estate man and president of the Edgemoor Citizens Association. He is married, the father of two sons and a daughter.

Warthen, a Fusion-Republican, is a builder and a native of the county. Only yesterday his father, Alfred C. Warthen, died.

Member of an old Damascus family, Souder, a Fusion-Democrat, is the son of former County Commissioner Philip Souder. His brother was County Commissioner Archie W. Souder, cashier of the Damascus Bank, who committed suicide about four years ago shortly after entering county office.

Warthen denied the charges in a statement late last night.

"I have taken no county money and I have no county money," said he.

"I have accounted for all that has

France Drafts $736,233,333 DefenseBudget

Finance Minister, However, Warns That Arms May Bankrupt Europe.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 30.— Finance Minister Georges Bonnet today presented a 1938 budget bill calling for a $101,900,000 increase in expenditures for armament, but suggested a move for armament reduction.

The bill's preamble carried a warning that "under pain of general financial catastrophe" Europe may be forced to seek an agreement on armament limitation.

The budget draft, submitted to the Chamber of Deputies finance committee, proposed total national defense expenditures for 1938, in both ordinary and extraordinary budgets, of 22,087,000,000 francs (about $736,233,333). Expenses in the ordinary budget are to be met by government receipts, and those in the extraordinary by borrowing.

This compares with 1937 military expenditures totaling 19,030,000,000 francs (about $634,333,333).

The budget will go to the chamber for debate when parliament reconvenes in the middle of November.

There were rumors of a cabinet crisis. The low state of the franc aggravated the situation. Premier Camille Chautemps conferred with President Lebrun. There was a general, but unconfirmed, report that Chautemps agreed to precede revaluation of the Bank of France's gold stock by setting a new parity for the franc in terms of dollars and pounds.

Franc-Aid Pact Hinted.

London (Friday), Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Indication that there may be some basis for reports of an impending second tri-partite monetary agreement to bolster the French franc was given today when the Financial Times said that an important currency statement might be issued simultaneously here and in Washington over the week-end.

Brazil Fears Revolution By Reds in Her Army

Rio De Janeiro, Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Communist infiltration into the Brazilian army has reached such a point that the government today planned to impose either a state of war or a state of siege throughout the nation.

Throngs Welcome Roosevelt To Canada in Great Ovation

Amity of Two Nations Expressed in Cheers of Thousands When President Makes Non-Political Visit to Victoria.

By Franklyn Waltman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Lake Crescent, Wash., Sept. 30.—In a gesture of international amity between the United States and Canada, President Roosevelt today was given a royal and enthusiastic reception by people of Victoria, British Columbia.

The President and his party arrived here at 6:45 p. m. (9:45 p. m. Eastern standard time) to spend the night in this Olympic Peninsula resort.

Although of no American political significance, the President's trip today to Victoria was a colorful and impressive spectacle of official pomp and protocol. Even rain which fell heavily most of the day did not dampen the enthusiasm of the Canadians in greeting Mr. Roosevelt on his arrival for luncheon with Lieut. Gov. Eric Hamber at Government House.

The President, in a press conference with Northwest Canadian newspapermen, revealed he had discussed with Mr. Hamber proposals for a highway from the United States to Alaska across British Columbia. He said negotiations for construction of the highway would

League Calls On Alien Troops To Leave Spain

Threatens to Permit Unrestricted Arms Shipments to Loyalists.

By the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 30.—The League of Nations Peace Commission tonight demanded "immediate and complete withdrawal" of all Italian and other foreign troops from Spain under threat of permitting unrestricted arms shipments to the loyalist armies.

The Assembly's peace commission, also called the sixth committee, adopted a sub-committee resolution instructing Great Britain and France to seek withdrawal of the volunteers.

If Premier Benito Mussolini refuses to withdraw the 150,000 or 200,000 Italians alleged to be serving in the insurgent ranks, the League is prepared to recommend scuttling of the nonintervention accord. Such an action would release 27 European nations from their pledges not to send arms and ammunitions to either Spanish faction.

Britain and France have prepared a note to be tendered to Mussolini tomorrow, inviting him to join them in tri-power talks on the volunteer question.

A temporary truce on all Spanish battle fronts while the foreign troops are withdrawn probably will be proposed

Bombs Cut Off China's Capital From Shanghai

BULLETIN.

Shanghai (Friday), Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Communications with Nanking were cut today by another Japanese air raid on the Chinese capital.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai, Friday, Oct. 1.—Gen. Chu Shao-liang's Chinese legion, hurling the full force of infantry and artillery at the Japanese lines near Hongkew, today began what observers believed was a desperate counter-thrust to break the Japanese "big push" before it started.

The Chinese apparently have pinned all their hopes on deadlocking the Japanese at Shanghai to prevent a breakdown of Chinese morale throughout the nation.

An hour before dawn siege guns, which the Chinese had dragged up near the Markham road sector, began pouring shells into Japanese lines at Hongkew. It was the heaviest Chinese artillery fire since fighting started here.

Foreign military experts believed the Chinese were gambling on a terrific artillery offensive to drive the Japanese back from the North Station area, key to the start of Japan's "big push" through Chapei.

Loss of the North Station, which the Chinese have defended successfully against a series of major artillery attacks, would severely cripple the Chinese defense against the expected Japanese drive inland.

Japanese planes took off from Yangtzepoo shortly after the firing started, attempting to spot the new Chinese batteries, but, except for sporadic firing toward Chapei, the Japanese batteries were silent.

$3,000,000 Grid Pool Raided; 3 Men Held

Reno, Nev., Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Sheriff's deputies tonight raided headquarters of a Nation-wide football pool organized to sell $3,000,000 worth of tickets and arrested three local officers on charges of violating the State antilottery law.

Russia Removes Admr. Orloff As Navy Commander-in-Chief

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Sept. 30.—Admiral Vladimir Orloff, who with Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, represented Soviet Russia at the coronation of George VI, has been removed as commander in chief of the Soviet navy, it became known today.

Pravda, official Communist organ, reporting a parade of naval officers newly graduated from the Soviet Naval Academy, referred to Admiral Victoroff, until now commander of the Far Eastern fleet, as commander in chief of the navy.

Orloff was also vice commissar of defense. His post corresponded to the army ranking of Marshal Tukhachevsky, vice commissar of defense, who was shot with seven other army heads last June.

It also was learned that Vice Admiral I. S. Isakoff, who had been chief of staff since January, recently replaced Admiral A. K. Sivkoff as commander of the Baltic fleet.

Meanwhile, provincial newspapers reported the execution of 24 more alleged enemies of the Soviet Union who were accused of spoiling grain.

Japan's Note Brings U. S. To Impasse

Open Break Hinted by Similarity to Stand on British Demands.

The Sino-Japanese War.

The United States and Japan were locked in a diplomatic impasse over Japanese air bombings of Chinese cities.

Chinese forces launched a fierce counter-offensive against Japanese at Shanghai.

U. S. Tension Grows.

Relations between Japan and the United States were in a badly snarled state last night, following Japan's blunt refusal to accept responsibility for losses or injury suffered by Americans from her war campaign in China.

The refusal, which followed repeated warnings that the United States would hold the Tokyo government responsible for such losses, and which was coupled with a new call for this country to move her diplomatic officials, citizens and naval vessels out of the danger zone, brought an apparent diplomatic impasse.

No official comment was made publicly here on Tokyo's note replying to this country's protest against bombing of Nanking and other Chinese cities. Secretary of State Hull said this country's protest and the reply from the Japanese government must be left to speak for themselves.

Parallel to British Incident.

However, gravity of the deadlock, created by Japan's stand, was emphasized in the minds of some observers by the parallel with Tokyo's earlier rejection of a British protest, and demand for indemnity for the wounding of the British Ambassador to China, Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen.

British reaction was so pronounced as to give rise to reports from London at the time that the British government contemplated

100,000 Communists Leave Inner China To Fight Invaders

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Sept. 30.—Chinese Communist troops and armies of western provincial warlords were ordered into action today in an apparently united Chinese battle against Japanese invaders.

Two hundred thousand more Chinese Communists were mustered to join their former enemies, Chinese nationalist troops, on the northern fronts. An American observer reported tens of thousands of warriors of all Chinese clans are leaving interior and coast cities for the North China and Shanghai battlefields.

Girl Refuses to Send Baby's Father to Jail

New York, Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Dorothy Campion had a chance to send the father of her illegitimate baby to prison today, but Joseph Hage went free because the young mother refused to sign a complaint and shame Hage's wife and two legitimate children.

The girl, 24 and slight, said Hage "didn't know a thing about it" until she handed the baby to him during last week's American Legion parade. Hage turned the baby over to police. He said a woman had asked him to hold it. Police investigated, learned the true circumstances and charged Hage with abandonment.

5,000 Kosher Butchers Adhere to Strike Plan

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—The Federation of Kosher Butchers decided today, despite an appeal for delay by Markets Commissioner W. F. Morgan, jr., to go ahead with its plan to close 5,000 retail shops in the Metropolitan area in a "shutdown" strike against high meat prices.

C.I.O. Victory Seen in First City Election

Apathy and Split Vote Give Lewis Upper Hand in Detroit.

U. A. W. Expenditure of $250,000 Reported in Initial Campaign.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Sept. 30.—Labor Generalissimo John L. Lewis, making his first bid for political power in one of the Nation's great cities, appeared to have the upper hand tonight in a primary campaign unique in Detroit's history.

With an election to nominate candidates for major offices of the city only five days off, a slate of labor candidates, backed by Lewis and his C. I. O., apparently was far out in front in voting strength as opposing candidates, split into three separate camps, struggled to shatter the city's apathy toward the contest.

In one of the most intensive campaigns this city has experienced in a decade, the full force of the C. I. O. and of Labor's Nonpartisan League has been thrown behind the Lewis slate, which, if successful Tuesday and again in the November election, will dominate the municipal government of Detroit.

In Patrick H. O'Brien, former attorney general of Michigan and long-time liberal, Lewis and his organization are staking their political future in this city. The U. A. W. has also entered five candidates for the nine-man Common Council, the legislative body of the city.

As evidence of labor's determination to win, reliable reports have circulated that the United Automobile Workers of America, fast-growing affiliate of the C. I. O., has spent $250,000 in the campaign.

Political observers also believe that yesterday's "purge" of progressive leaders of the U. A. W. was unquestionably a political move. The action of Homer Martin, union president, was dictated, they declare, by a desire to placate foes of some of U. A. W.'s "radical" division chiefs and thus win more votes for the labor ticket, rather than an economy move as Martin claimed.

Today's unexpected flareback from the "purge," in which disgruntled U. A. W. members picketed Martin's hotel room and finally were faced by Martin with a pistol, will cost the labor ticket some votes, observers think, but will not be sufficiently important to turn the tide against the Lewis slate.

Martin announced tonight that he would go to Washington tomorrow to confer with Lewis. Reports cir-

Browder Willing To Drop Pacifism To Fight Fascists

Boston, Sept. 30 (AP).—Earl Browder, the Communist Party's 1936 Presidential candidate, declared today that, although he went to prison for opposing conscription during the World War, he now stands ready to take up arms for the United States against "those Fascist countries that are tearing the world apart."

Browder, general secretary for the party, made the assertion while under interrogation before a special legislative commission investigating Nazi, Fascist, Communist, and Ku Klux Klan activities in Massachusetts.

Black to Answer Klan Accusation On Air Tonight

Chief Justice White Called Klan Member

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 30 (U.P.).—The United States' Chief Justice from 1910 to 1921 was a former member of the Ku Klux Klan, Thomas Dixon, author of the novel from which the motion picture "The Birth of a Nation" was taken, asserted here today.

Dixon said Edward Douglass White, appointed to the U. S. Supreme Court in 1894, "rode as an officer in the Klan ranks when he was a young man. White, a Roman Catholic, was Chief Justice for the 11 years prior to his death in 1921. The old Klan did not crusade against Catholics.

"At the time he took his seat on the bench," said Dixon, now clerk of Federal District Court here, "White had no connection with the Klan. The old Klan had died out then."

Alexandria Kin Denies Justice Talked With Roosevelt.

Speech Will Set Court Precedent

Ex-Senator Will Defend Public Record at 9:30 on 3 Networks.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a speech breaking all precedent, Associate Justice Hugo L. Black will talk at 9:30 p. m. today over vast radio networks, "so that the people can hear it," in defense of his public record and in answer to charges of Klan membership.

The former Alabama Senator, whose appointment and confirmation to a seat on the highest tribunal precipitated a national controversy still raging, will speak for 20 minutes.

The justice is reported to have sought the counsel yesterday of close friends and advisors to familiarize himself with the exact nature of the Klan controversy that has flared in his absence.

Whether or not he refers to the Klan in his speech or even admits former membership, it is believed he will stand firmly on his record in the Senate. He might even point out that the active Klan association is alleged to have occurred more than a decade ago, and that his record since entering the Senate is not that of a member of the secret order. It was thought possible he might deny life membership charges.

Roosevelt Call Denied.

Mrs. Clifford J. Durr, of nearby Seminary Hill, Va., his sister-in-law, set at rest one persistent report—that Justice Black had talked with President Roosevelt by long distance telephone since his arrival in Norfolk, Va., Wednesday.

"That report is absolutely and entirely imaginary," said Mrs. Durr. "I was with him almost constantly from the time we left Norfolk, and I know for a fact that he did not make such a call."

Although no final choice of a place for the broadcast had been made last night, it appeared to lie between the National Broadcasting studio, which was likely, and a hotel room.

There was only a remote possibility the speech would be made from the Durr home, or from Black's Supreme Court chambers, although all locations had been under discussion.

No Intention of Quitting.

A decision will be reached this morning. Also, Black will be asked to decide whether a small audience, including newspapermen, will be present, or whether newspaper photographs or sound films will be permitted.

With apparently no intention of resigning either under fire or subsequently, the new associate justice chose a strategic hour to present his case, just three days before he is expected to take his seat on the bench on opening of the regular fall court term.

There was no precedent for a radio speech by a justice on a controversial subject. Columbia Broadcasting Co. officials said radio speeches of any kind by justices could be "counted on the fingers of one hand." The last such address of a personal nature was when the late Justice Holmes spoke over a national hook-up seven years ago on his ninetieth anniversary.

Although Black has not yet sat with his assembled Supreme Court colleagues, he is a full-fledged justice under the law, having been confirmed by the Senate and taken the oaths required. If he is administered the oath again on Monday, it will be only at his request.

A full half-hour of radio time has

U. S. Contracts For First Liner At $15,750,000

By William V. Nessly.

The United States, through the Maritime Commission, last night let the contract for the first ship, "the finest and safest liner on the seas," in the tremendous program contemplated by the merchant marine act of 1936 to give the country a completely "adequate" merchant marine.

The commission, it was announced by Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, accepted the bid of $15,750,000, on an adjusted price basis, made by the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., for construction of a model fireproof passenger and cargo liner to replace the giant Leviathan in the North Atlantic competition. The adjusted price basis provides for adjustment of the final cost of the ship on account of changes in the cost of labor and materials, up to 15 per cent, which may occur during the time of construction. The ship must be constructed within 852 days.

At the same time the commission gave the first indication of the size of the construction subsidy that will be provided by the Government in its shipbuilding undertaking, fixing at 33 1-3 per cent of the cost the Government's grant in the case of the first liner.

The United States Lines Co., which will operate the vessel, will be required to make an initial payment to the Government of 25 per cent of the contract price. The balance of the cost, less the amount of the subsidy, must be repaid to the Government within 20 years.

The company had contended for a higher subsidy, Kennedy said, on the grounds that it could not profitably operate the vessel in competition with foreign ships if its capital investment were so high. Following a meeting of the company directors in New York yesterday, however, Kennedy was notified by phone that the one-third figure would be accepted.

Mate Lost, Judith Allen Asks $2,000,000 of Delphine Dodge

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 30.—Judith Allen, screen actress, late today filed a $2,000,000 alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell Baker Godde, alleging loss of the love of her husband, Jack Doyle, the crooning Irish boxer.

Mrs. Godde, heiress to the Dodge automobile fortune, is planning a divorce from her present husband, reportedly to marry Doyle.

Miss Allen obtained an interlocutory divorce decree from the garrulous boxer last April, but the divorce will not be final until next April.

The suit, filed in Los Angeles Superior Court, accused the heiress of coming between the actress and Doyle while a reconciliation was in prospect.

Miss Allen alleged that her rival "persuaded, enticed and abducted him from the plaintiff by offering him several hundred thousand dollars for the purpose of creating a life of luxury for him, and by giving him many gifts amounting to many thousands of dollars."

JUDITH ALLEN.

Right to Block SEC Publication of Private Data Upheld

Appeals Court Acts to Guard Trade Secrets

Watch, Nickel and Tobacco Companies Win First Skirmish.

Orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission making public "confidential information" contained in registration statements filed with it can be attacked in the Federal appeals courts, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday in an opinion written by Associate Justice D. Lawrence Groner.

The question was brought up in petitions filed by the Bulova Watch Co., Inc., the International Nickel Co., of Canada, Ltd., and the American Sumatra Tobacco Corporation, each of which had appealed to the Securities Commission to withhold from general public inspection certain items in their statements.

The tobacco company sought privacy for its gross sales, cost of the nickel company sought to The Nickel company sought to have withheld information concerning remuneration to officers and employes, profit and loss statement, portions of its expenses for maintenance, taxes, royalties and the like, while the watch company asked that items dealing with gross sales, "mark up" and cost of goods sold be withheld from inspection.

After formal hearings the commission decreed that the information which the companies sought to have held confidential was of public interest and should be made public. From that order the companies appealed to the courts, and the SEC retaliated with the assertion the courts had no jurisdiction to interfere in such matters.

However, in the words of Justice Groner, the companies had a "property right" in their confidential affairs and could seek a court ruling to restrain publication of trade secrets and the like. The opinion yesterday ruled solely on the right of the courts to review official findings of the commission and did not act to restrain it from actually making public the debatable information. It took the form of a denial of the commission's motion to dismiss petitions which were aimed at judicial review of the publication order.

Wallace Sponsors Employe Lectures

A series of lectures sponsored by Secretary Wallace to inform employes of administrative management will begin tonight at the Department of Agriculture.

"The administrative management of the government needs overhauling," a statement by President Roosevelt last January, prompted the Secretary to open the course, to which have been invited eight prominent speakers.

"The National Movement for Better Public Service," is the topic tonight of Ordway Tread, editor, economist, and past president of the Society for Advancement of Management. He speaks at 5 o'clock.

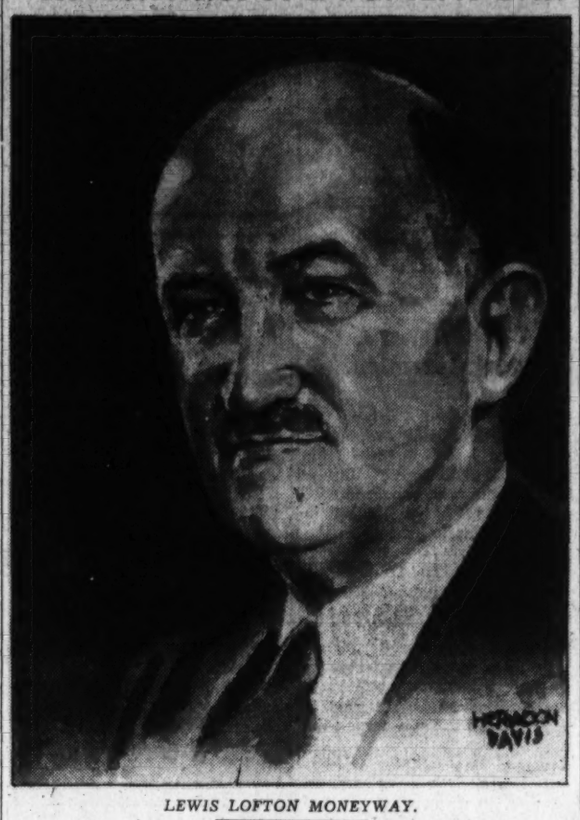
Palmisano Against Tuition Charges

District officials learned yesterday Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee will oppose their proposal either to bar or charge tuition to nonresident pupils in Washington public schools, but said they would press the legislation.

Members of the Maryland and Virginia delegations in both the House and Senate always have fought any plan to make their constituents pay for public school privileges in the Capital.

Working For Washington

Civic Interests Also Included In Activities of D. C. Arts Club



LEWIS LOFTON MONEYWAY.

Although formed for promotion and betterment of the seven arts in Washington, the Arts Clubs never holds an official meeting without asking for a report from its civics committee. This committee represents the club at monthly meetings of the Federation of Citizens Associations and is consulted by the federation on all matters affecting the artistic life of the city.

The Arts Club was started 21 years ago and has between 500 and 600 members drawn from seven artistic fields, as follows: drama, music, sculpture, painting, industrial art, poetry and architecture.

Its civics committee for this season includes C. Virginia Diedel, Washington attorney, who is interested in the drama, and Mrs. Robert Walter Mess, whose talent is music.

Its president for the last two terms has been Lewis Lofton Moneyway, veteran teacher of short story writing and former member of the English faculty of George Washington University.

With no trouble, Mr. Moneyway can recite a long list of the club's civic accomplishments. Each two or three weeks, for instance, it has a new art exhibit put up for public pleasure and enlightenment. In the auditorium of its clubhouse at 2017 I street northwest are given some of the best musical programs and lectures in Washington.

Its dramatic offerings, both in its outdoor garden theater and inside, are enjoyed by many hundreds. If that is not enough to convince that the Arts Club is a civic organization, there is always to be remembered the Bal Boheme—the big costume ball it stages each winter, and which is important enough to attract visitors from throughout the United States.

The civics committee will work this winter for the classification and rating of motion pictures, in order that moviegoers may have an index to the type of show they can expect from a given attendance.

Mr. Moneyway is a native of Mobile, Ala., but has been in Washington many years. His penthouse studio, on Nineteenth street, is just about as popular a place as is the regular clubhouse of the group he heads. For 14 years it has been a rendezvous for the writers and would-be writers of the District of Columbia. During that time Mr. Moneyway has taught students who are now scattered all over the globe and entertained many others who just dropped in "to talk."

In addition to being one of the best-known hosts of Washington, he is one of the city's most consistent "collectors." In his studio are curtains stamped with scenes from the Edward coronation which never took place, a bell from an Egyptian tomb, a plate made by Rumanian monks, and a hundred other things of similar interest.

He is an active member of the University Club, and for ten years headed its entertainment committee. Best of all his interests, however, Mr. Moneyway likes the stimulation he receives from the boys and girls who come to him as students.

Monday—Subject of the "Working for Washington" series will be L. A. Carruthers, president of the Forest Hills Citizens' Association.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 30.—Cotton experts of nine Southern States conferred today on details of the Administration's 1938 farm program as they speculated on the nature of Secretary Henry Wallace's proposed permanent policy for the South's "money" crop.

The Wallace proposal, to be outlined at a public meeting here tomorrow, was expected to embrace the Secretary's belief the cotton problem ca nbe solved only through a new approach.

Sources close to the Secretary said he has devoted much study to methods for disposal of this year's estimated 16,000,000-bale crop.

Before leaving Washington today, Wallace said he would attempt to convince Southern leaders that his "middle way"—a course midway between abandonment of world markets and unlimited expansion of acreage—should be adopted.

I. W. Duggan, acting Southern director of the Soil Conservation Service, was in charge of today's conference of farm leaders.

The acreage goal for cotton growers in 1938, as set by Wallace, is from 29,000,000 to 31,000,000 acres. This, under current yield, should produce from 10,500,000 to 11,000,000 bales.

Roosevelt Planning to 'Despoil' Court, Burke Tells Bar

Lawyers Now Are 'Whipping Boys,' He Says

Criticism by President Is to 'Mine' Opposition, He Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Sept. 30.—Senator Edward R. Burke, Nebraska Democrat, warned the American Bar Association tonight that the forces which "deliberately set about to despoil the Federal judiciary" already have "re-formed their broken lines" for a new court fight.

Earlier the Justice Black question had split the association wide open in an uproarious meeting, climaxed by a drive for a resolution condemning judicial membership in a secret order "actuated by religious and racial animosity."

Tonight the resolutions committee struggled with the thorny task of drafting a suitable expression, and tomorrow will come the vital struggle on whether agreement can be reached by the convention on any public declaration.

Notes Roosevelt Attack.

Senator Burke, who was a spearhead in the Senate battle against President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan, said the next fight likely will be over the right of the court to review legislation and rule on its constitutionality.

"It may be that when the next engagement is on, some of the leaders in the former fight will be missing," he said in a prepared speech.

"There is on hand a plentiful supply of poison gas ready for use."

He interpreted recent criticism of lawyers by President Roosevelt as part of a strategic move "to lay a mine under the chief shock troops that successfully resisted the late unlamented attack."

"There was a time when the banker was the favorite 'whipping boy,'" Burke added.

Upholding the theory of a balance of power among the executive, legislative and judiciary as the most cardinal point in the Constitution, Burke said:

"If the President is half as wise as I give him credit for being, he is even now giving full heed to the fact that, since the emergency is largely at an end, Congress is on the verge of functioning again as the legislative department."

The bar's general assembly killed a suggestion to make a specific investigation of Black, but by a narrow vote of 193 to 161 refused to drop the entire subject.

Back to Committee.

By a loud voice vote, the assembly preserved a portion of an original resolution on the Black question, coupled to it some new ideas and recommitted the whole task to the resolutions committee.

The train of events began Monday night when a resolution offered by 73-year-old Robert Lee Tullis, former Louisiana State University law dean, was reported adversely from committee today with the statement "there is nothing now pending in respect of which the association could take any effective action." Apparently the committee took the point of view that once he is confirmed only misconduct in office is ground for impeachment of a justice.

Tullis, himself, moved to kill the section of the resolution concerning a five-man investigation and this was clipped off in the assembly.

Regardless to the assembly's final action on the Black question, it must be ratified by the house of delegates before it becomes the official expression of the bar association.

Court Rulings Deplored.

In a minority report on another resolution Charles M. Hay, of St. Louis, deplored the close Supreme Court decisions that held some New Deal legislation unconstitutional.

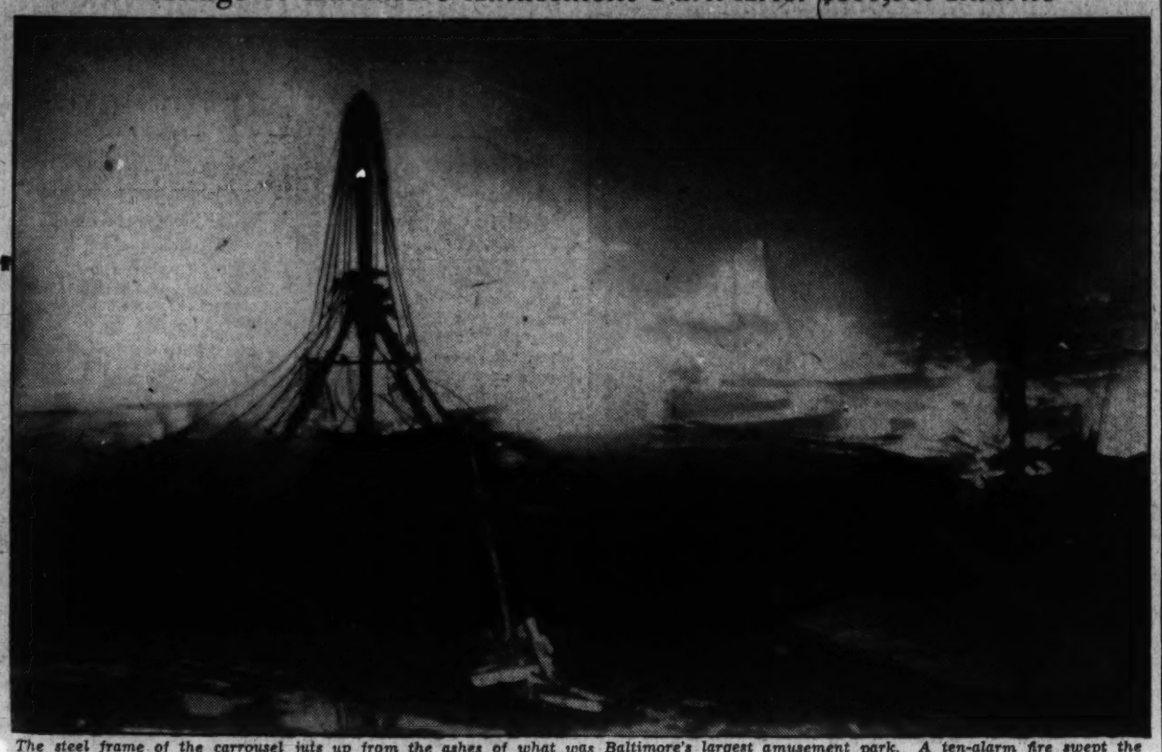
"In fact," he said, "the years 1935-36 may well be known in history as the era of 'nullification by judicial construction.'"

John D. Clark, of Cheyenne, Wyo., had proposed that when a minority of the court holds a statute constitutional, other members should abide by the "rule of reasonable doubt" and sustain the statute. The assembly rejected the resolution.

Maryland U. Gets Silvester Picture

An oil protrait of Dr. Richard W. Silvester, president of Maryland Agricultural College, now the University of Maryland, from 1892 to 1912, was unveiled in the board of regents room at the university yesterday by Edmund C. Mayo, who presented it to the institution.

Wreckage of Baltimore Amusement Park After $300,000 Inferno



The steel frame of the carrousel juts up from the ashes of what was Baltimore's largest amusement park. A ten-alarm fire swept the four-acre area early yesterday, destroying all the wooden devices and causing damage estimated at approximately $300,000.

$300,000 Fire Levels Carlin's At Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Sept. 30—A spectacular $300,000 fire destroyed Carlin's, Baltimore's largest amusement park, early today, injuring two firemen.

Ten alarms called out 60 pieces of apparatus to battle the spectacular blaze. The fire alarm bureau said more alarms had been sounded only twice before—in the great city-wide, 2 blocks north by 8 blocks east fire of 1904 and in the Fifth Regiment Armory fire a few years ago.

Only one building, the dance hall, in the area covering several city blocks was saved as a stiff breeze swept 100-foot-high tongues of flame from one wooden structure to another. J. J. Carlin, owner of the Carlin's Park amusement center, would estimate damage only at "well over $250,000."

Carlin said it was not covered by insurance.

Blasts Hamper Firemen.

Hundreds of firemen called by ten alarms fought for more than two hours before bringing the blaze under control. They were handicapped by bursting hose, explosions from a gasoline tank and because they had to string hose for several blocks.

Origin of the blaze, believed to have started in the arena, was not determined immediately.

Seven large structures were destroyed in the first hour.

The wooden roller coaster which loops around the park caught fire and carried the flames to other buildings on the grounds.

Family Flees Flames.

Mrs. Carl Mulsey, wife of the park superintendent, awakened by a headache, saw the glare of the flames and awakened her family in time to escape from their cottage on the park grounds.

With flames shooting 100 feet in the air a shower of sparks flew south and west of the burning buildings, igniting brush and grass fires and falling on rooftops. Firemen pounced on the incipient blazes before they could gain headway.

Court Issue Killed By 'Left' Rulings, Ashurst Believes

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 30 (AP).—Senator Henry F. Ashurst, who as chairman of the Judiciary Committee steered President Roosevelt's bill for reorganization of the Federal courts, said today he believed the issue dead.

Replying to a question as to whether he expected the court bill to come before the next session of Congress, Ashurst referred to a mimeographed page he said was taken from an entry in his diary the day Congress adjourned.

It concluded:

"It would seem as if Eff Dee's (Franklin D. Roosevelt's) bill to rejuvenate the judicial branch is now moribund as a result of these late decisions which go as far to the 'left' as any justice appointed by Eff Dee could go."

Ashurst said he would not support "any proposition or Constitutional amendment which would take from the courts the power to declare laws unconstitutional."

Firm Threatens New Coal Act Test

By the Associated Press.

The Carter Coal Co., of West Virginia, which successfully challenged the first Guffey coal control act in the Supreme Court, threatened at a bituminous coal commission hearing yesterday to go to court again.

The commission, engaged in hearings to classify coals according to performance values, preliminary to fixing minimum prices under the present revised act, devoted most of the day to the classification proposals of District 7, southern West Virginia, where the Carter mines are situated.

Housing Project Occupied in N. Y.

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Four hundred families today began moving into Williamsburg houses, PWA's largest venture in public housing.

C. I. O. Meeting Cheers Union Peace Demand

Mayor Hoan Urges Peace at Convention of Wisconsin Group.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 30.—The Wisconsin C. I. O. convention, first in the Nation, today applauded declarations by Socialist Mayor Daniel Hoan of Milwaukee and Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, that the C. I. O. and A. F. L. should settle their differences quickly.

Hoan told the 523 delegates that if the leaders could not "find enough brains to end their dispute, they should be blown to hell."

"The C. I. O.," said Bernard, an organizer for the Steel Workers Organization Committee, "must convince workers in the A. F. L. unions of its sincerity and friendliness. It must convince them that its only aim is to advance the cause of all who work. Labor should not permit the forces of reaction to use the Napoleonic strategy of dividing its ranks."

Builders in Dispute.

Denver, Sept. 30 (AP).—A new civil war which might affect most of the country's home builders threatened tonight to break out in the American Federation of Labor.

Behind the scenes at the annual convention of the federation's building trades department, leaders of the 19 construction unions were engaged in a bitter factional feud. Selection of new department officers and the present method of settling jurisdictional disputes were at issue.

Leaders of one faction talked of leaving the department if the other had its way. Both sides agreed that a split would mean a tremendous increase in the number of strikes resulting from jurisdictional disputes.

Meanwhile, Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, said he would offer a detailed plan to the convention to help eliminate the federation's differences with the C. I. O.

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Department reported yesterday that wholesale commodity prices last week were 8 per cent higher than a year ago.

District Beggar With $61 in Shoes Forfeits $50 Bond

Arrested Wednesday afternoon for soliciting alms, Malen Solar, 57, of 318 Fourth street northwest, forfeited $50 collateral rather than face charges in Police Court yesterday.

Solar, who had been arrested by Private R. M. Kesselring, of the Second Precinct, was jailed after a search of his clothing revealed only 35 cents. But when he offered to put up first $5, then $10 as collateral, police searched him again, this time finding $61 in his shoes. Collateral was set at $50.

G. O. P. Broadens Fund Campaign

By the Associated Press.

The Republican National Committee is making a new approach to party fund raising through establishment of State finance committees.

Previously the party has obtained funds largely through concentrated efforts for contributions during campaign years.

Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, announcing organization of a Pennsylvania finance committee yesterday, disclosed the national committee intends to broaden the base of its campaign fund activities with a view of obtaining a large number of small contributions.

Meehan's Career In Market Ends

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—A formal "finis" was written today to the spectacular career of 47-year-old Michael J. Meehan on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, where he was one of the most bullish of the "bulls" in the boom days before October, 1929.

The stock exchange, in a terse announcement, disclosed arrangements for transfer of Meehan's membership to Thomas E. Doherty, who will become a partner in the firm of M. J. Meehan & Co. The firm will continue as a member of the exchange.

This carried out the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, which, two months ago, ordered Meehan expelled after finding him guilty of stock manipulation.

Voting Closes, Fidelity Plan's Chances 'Fair'

Large Stockholders Take Sides Against Reorganization.

Balloting on the proposal to convert the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association into a new First Federal Building & Loan came to an end last night, with the chances of approval described as "fair."

Since the receiver, James H. Nolan, must accept shareholders' votes postmarked up to midnight September 30, a complete tabulation will not be ready until sometime this afternoon. The count will be on the number of dollars invested, not the number of persons owning shares.

Numerous large shareholders have declared themselves against the plan. Their reason was twofold. First, they said, they wanted a substantial cash payment. Second, they wanted representation on the board of directors.

Under the plan as authorized by the Treasury and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, no single bloc of shareholders was wanted on the board of directors.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board has announced that should the proposal fail in the referendum there would be little likelihood of any satisfactory plan being produced.

Spanish Cortes to Convene, Ranks Shorn by War, Socialist Chief Out

Leftist Head's Removal Aids Negrin's Cause

Premier's More Moderate Ideas Gain Ground Over Caballero's.

By the Associated Press.

Valencia, Spain, Sept. 30.—The Cortes (Parliament) will open tomorrow with former Premier Francisco Largo Caballero missing as coleader of the Socialist delegation.

In addition, less than half of the 470 Cortes delegates elected in February were expected to attend.

The former Premier and Rudolfo Llopis, leader of the U. G. T. (General Union of Workers), have been replaced as leaders of the Socialist delegation by Ramon Gonzales Pena and Ramon Lamonada.

Officials said they expected only about 180 delegates would attend the parliamentary session, the vacancies representing not only seats held by Rightists, but by Leftists who have been imprisoned or executed by the insurgents.

Sharp Setback to Leader.

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Ousting of Francisco Largo Caballero as chief of the Socialist delegation in the Spanish Parliament is a sharp setback to the veteran Socialist leader, and represents for the moment triumph of the more moderate ideas of Premier Juan Negrin and War Minister Indalecio Prieto.

By nature and a lifetime of fighting, Largo has an antigovernment background which is hard for him to shed, and since his ouster as premier, early in 1937 he has never concealed his opposition to the more moderate policies of Premier Negrin and his war minister.

Largo, in fact, once threatened to take the stump and carry out a campaign against the policies of the Negrin government, but his friends thus far have dissuaded him. His chief difficulty has been that he is unwilling to accept the necessity of compromising with his revolutionary doctrines and the needs of carrying on a war.

Eden Warns Il Duce.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Sept. 30.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden has sent an "advance warning" to Premier Benito Mussolini that unless Italian troops leave Spain, he will shoulder responsibility for a situation which might easily develop into a European war, it was revealed tonight.

The warning was delivered through the Italian Ambassador in London, Dino Grandi, on the eve of the dispatch of a Franco-British note to Rome inviting Il Duce to join in a three-power discussion of the volunteers question.

Nazi Secret Police Close Seminaries

Wirephoto: New Navy Aircraft Carrier Yorktown Commissioned

Amidst colorful ceremonies the U. S. Navy's new aircraft carrier was put into commission yesterday. Built at Newport News at a cost of $20,000,000, she measures 761 feet in length, weighs 20,000 tons and carries a crew of 2,000 officers and men. Pictured above at the Norfolk Navy base, she will serve as flagship of Rear Admiral Charles A. Blakely, commanding squadron that will be composed of the Yorktown and her sister ship, the Enterprise, now under construction.

Rome Cheers Duce's Report Of Hitler Axis

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 30.—Premier Mussolini told the cheering throng which welcomed him home from Berlin tonight that Italy and Germany are joined to seek a "rebirth of Europe." At the same time it became known Fuehrer Adolf Hitler has accepted Il Duce's invitation to make a state visit to Italy. Date of the visit has not been set.

In one of the shortest speeches Il Duce ever made, he proclaimed:

"Blackshirts—I bring a profound and indelible memory of my conversations with Der Fuehrer of Germany. Italian and German friendship, consecrated in the policy of the Rome-Berlin axis, has become engraved on the heart of two nations in these days and there it will remain.

"The objects of this friendship are strict solidarity between the two revolutions (Fascist and Nazi), the rebirth of Europe and peace between the peoples worthy of the name."

(In Berlin, Mussolini had predicted Europe would turn Fascist. He had joined with Hitler in renewed denunciation of communism.)

From the balcony of Palazzo Venezia he made a brief "report" on his visit to Chancellor Hitler.

Rumania Reported Set to Ban Baptists

By the Associated Press.

The State Department promised yesterday to investigate a report that all Baptist churches in Rumania would be closed October 15 by government decree.

The report was called to the attention of R. Walton Moore, State Department counsellor, by Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, of Washington, chairman of the Northern Baptist Convention's committee on public relations.

End Freedom of Press Aberhart Asks in Bill

Edmonton, Alberta, Sept. 30 (U.P.).—A drastic press-control bill, which would force Alberta newspapers to disclose at the request of the government the sources of their information and the names of all writers of editorials, articles and news items, was introduced in the Alberta Legislature today. The bill would give Premier Aberhart authority to suspend publication of newspapers contravening the law and to fine the publisher.

Chinese Envoy to Debate With Author Over Radio

Chinese Ambassador C. T. Wang and Dr. Lin Yutang, author, will discuss the Sino-Japanese conflict on the radio at 7:15 tonight, it was announced last night by the Chinese Embassy.

Dr. Yutang will answer questions asked by the Ambassador regarding the war, and at 8 p. m. will deliver a lecture on the hostilities at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest.

Rebels Rushed To Bar Way to French Border

Loyalists Claim Big Gains Toward Possible Source of Arms Imports.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 30.—Spanish government officers said tonight insurgents were rushing heavy reinforcements into Jaca, near the French border, to meet an unchecked Spanish government drive less than 20 miles away.

Threats that the French border may be opened to munitions shipments for government forces gave the railroad center at Jaca strategic importance.

Further south on the Aragon front government troops advanced to within eleven miles of Zaragoza, key city at the confluence of the Ebro and Gallego rivers. Fifty government airplanes launched an offensive in the Zuera sector, a few miles north of Zaragoza.

The government said that in four days its northwest advance had covered about 70 square miles.

Government advices said a dozen insurgent airplanes raided government territory in Asturias province, setting fire to several towns.

The surrounding towns of Villaviciosa, Infiesta, Villamayor, Cancasdeonis, and several others bore the brunt of the attack, which resulted in an undetermined number of casualties.

Supported by planes insurgent infantry and artillery drove toward Gijon, crossed the Sella river and strengthened their lines west of Ribadesella.

France to Oust Refugees.

Paris, Sept. 30 (AP).—Marx Dormoy, French Minister of the Interior, announced tonight that the government planned to repatriate immediately 55,000 Spaniards who have sought refuge in France since the outbreak of the Spanish civil war.

The expense to the government of feeding and lodging the refugees has averaged 1,000,000 francs ($34,200) a day. Dormoy declared those to be repatriated would be permitted to choose between insurgent and government Spain.

U. S. and Japan Reach Impasse Over Bombing

sounding out the American Government informally on what the United States' attitude would be if Britain withdrew diplomatic representatives from Tokyo.

The Tokyo refusal to assume responsibility for damages suffered by Americans was contained in the closing paragraph of yesterday's note, declaring the Japanese stand was the same as that stated in its note of August 31. The latter note, Secretary Hull said, was in reply to a communication from the United States that both China and Japan would be held responsible for losses to Americans in the fighting.

Japan replied, disclaiming responsibility for the fighting in China, holding that the hostilities had been forced upon her and refusing to acknowledge responsibility for safety of nationals of other countries. This reply Secretary Hull yesterday termed adverse and unfavorable to the American position.

The Secretary of State September 10 reiterated this country's intention to hold Japan responsible and took the same stand in the protest of September 22 against the bombing of Nanking and other cities.

Japan's call for the United States to "co-operate," presumably by moving its officials and ships out of danger spots, met a cool reception.

Warning that the bombing of Nanking may be expected to continue was seen in Japan's assertion that "the bombing of the military facilities and equipment located in and around the said city is a necessary and unavoidable measure."

Any likelihood the United States would withdraw officials or ships from that area was held to have been dispelled by return to the American Embassy there of Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson after he had taken refuge temporarily on an American gunboat, and a later declaration by Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, that United States war vessels would be kept in Chinese waters for protection of Americans regardless of "dangers."

Idle Bank Funds Climb $40,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday idle bank funds climbed another $40,000,000 during the week ended September 29.

The increase followed a $140,000,000 rise in these funds, or "excess reserves," in the previous week, and brought the total to $1,060,000,000.

Excess reserves have been climbing steadily since inauguration of the recent Reserve Board-Treasury credit-easing program.

British Liberals And Labor Back Japan Boycott

Invasion Denounced at Mass Meeting; World-Wide Support Urged.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 30.—British Liberals and Laborites promoted an anti-Japanese boycott throughout the empire tonight.

Public gatherings denounced the Japanese invasion of China. An informed source disclosed the British colonial authorities at Kongkong had opened an official inquiry into the reported sinking of Chinese fishing junks and loss of 300 lives under attack by a Japanese submarine.

Although sponsors of the boycott admitted there was little hope of obtaining the government's open indorsement, they expressed confidence the movement will spread to other countries.

The National Council of Labor, which declared a boycott, said a wide response had been given its proposal to hold demonstrations throughout Britain over the week-end. Demonstrators will express opposition to bombing of Chinese civilians.

Ben Tillett, labor leader, urged dock workers throughout the world to follow the example of New Zealand dock workers, against whose boycott the Wellington Japanese Chamber of Commerce protested.

The British Red Cross sent medical supplies to China and announced an appeal for funds to aid the Chinese would be launched.

The British Labor Party planned to demand an emergency session of Parliament as the first step toward a world boycott of Japanese goods.

Britain Sends Destroyer To Aid in Palestine Crisis

London, Sept. 30 (AP).—The British destroyer Active sailed hurriedly tonight from Malta for Haifa. No official statement was made here, but it was believed the vessel's movement was connected with tension in northern Palestine growing out of the slaying of Lewis Andrews, British commissioner of Galilee.

Byrnes, With Foreign Data, to Start Senate Relief Study

Plan Is Sought To Match U. S. And Local Cash

12 Points Considered; Full Meeting Expected in November.

Returning from Europe today with data on British and Continental relief systems, Senator James F. Byrnes, South Carolina Democrat, will take over personal direction of a Senate relief investigation in quest of a permanent solution of the unemployment question.

Alan Johnstone, counsel for the special Senate Committee on Unemployment Relief, will lay before Byrnes a tentative 12-point agenda, ranging from the costs and burden of unemployment to financial capacity of States and cities to shoulder a larger share of responsibility.

Flexible Formula Sought.

Byrnes will arrive in New York today and return to Washington for conferences with Johnstone. Later the proposed scope of the inquiry, already under way, will be laid before a full committee meeting, probably in November, for approval and additional suggestions.

Byrnes, chairman of the Senate group, is said to be seeking a flexible formula for matching of Federal with local relief funds, based on a careful study of State and municipal budgets and tax systems, as well as local capacity and willingness to lighten the Federal load.

Local Queries Sent.

Inquiries on the broader aspects of the relief problem already have been addressed by Byrnes to mayors, Governors of States, labor and industrial leaders, State commissioners of labor, members of the Commerce Department's business advisory counsel, newspaper editors, and others.

In Byrnes' absence, Johnstone, a former WPA official, already has been in touch with heads of relief agencies and others, assembling data on unemployment trends, relief statistics and technological forces. He is co-operating with John D. Biggers, director of the special voluntary census of unemployed, and is serving on Biggers' advisory committee.

On the tentative agenda, to be submitted to the Senate committee for revision, are the following points:

1. The effect of machine improvements and inventions over a continuing period on labor, and what can be done to overcome displacements of labor by technicological changes.
2. The number of people receiving relief benefits under WPA, PWA, CCC, and operation of the social security program.
3. The historical entry of the United States into the relief business, and the underlying objectives.
4. The economic value of projects undertaken under the work relief program, as opposed to the operation of direct relief.
5. Analysis of the results of the coming voluntary unemployment census.
6. Study of the effects of the so-called depression "security wage" as opposed to the "prevailing wage."
7. The special problem of rural relief.
8. The financial ability of States and cities to finance relief.
9. Training and retraining of the unemployed, to prepare them for work.
10. The effectiveness of unemployment offices and labor exchanges in coping with the relief problem.
11. Administration of relief and social security programs, with comparison of advantages of Federal and local direction.
12. Special study of the problem of the migratory unemployed.

C. I. O. Men 'Sit-Down' On Great Lakes Ship

Cleveland, Sept. 30 (AP).—Members of the C. I. O.-Affiliated National Maritime Union staged a sit-down strike today aboard the package freighter H. A. Hayes Jones, union organizer, said the strike was called in protest against a closed shop agreement signed by the Great Lakes Transit Corporation and the A. F. L. International Seamen's Union.

Paintings of Indian Life From Days of Sir Walter Raleigh Represented in Collection of 3,000 Works at National Museum

'Herowans and Chieffs' and Tribal Customs Recorded in Valuable Group.

Sir Walter Raleigh had no photographer to send to America with the Virginia expedition in 1585.

Instead he sent Ihon White, gentleman adventurer and artist, to record in paint the lives of Indians, "theire sitting at meate, theire herowans and chieffs, theire hyghe feastes." After White came other artists, who went among the Indians to record their life and customs.

Of their work, more than 3,000 paintings have been acquired by the National Museum, and a few chosen paintings are on display on the main floor of the museum today—then they will be returned, many of them to storage, and a few to their hanging places on the top floor of the building.

The bulk of the paintings have never been placed on display for lack of wall space, but they can be seen on application to H. W. Kreiger, curator of ethnology.

Kreiger and Dr. Alexander Wetmore, museum director, commandeered the temporarily empty gallery to show the prize work of the collection, including rare work by C. B. King, George Catlin, John Mix Stanley, several native Indians and others.

Many Lost in Fires.

Seven paintings by King and five by Stanley represent the only existing original work of these artists. Most of their paintings were lost in two fires: King's in a fire at the War Department and Stanley's in the Smithsonian fire in 1867.

King painted for the War Department for more than 15 years from 1822, recording the faces and costumes of the many Indians who came to Washington on tribal business. Much of his work was copied before the fire by Henry Inman for publication in lithograph form by McKenney & Hall.

Stanley covered the activities of the Indians for many years, and among his five paintings, valued at more than $100,000, is a picture of an international Indian conference, held at Talaquah, in the Cherokee Nation, in 1843. Stanley attended the conference along with 10,000 Indians, representing 17 tribes.

Osage Scalp Dance.

Most valuable of the five Stanley paintings is one showing an Osage scalp dance around a white woman and her child. One warrior has raised his club to strike the woman and the chief has leaped forward to stop the blow with his spear.

"Because there are so few original Stanleys, the painting is probably worth more than $25,000, but its value to us rests on the accurate detail, both in painting the costumes and in describing the tribal rites," Kreiger said.

Among the portraits are the faces of many who were once famous warriors—Nah-Pope, one of Black Hawk's chief advisers; Wi-Jun-Jon Ko-Rak-Koo-Kiss, famous for an attempted theft of horses from Fort Milan, Tex.; Nau-Che-Ning-Ga, or No Heart, of the Ioway Tribe; Kish-Ke-Kosh, No-Way-Ke-Sug-Ga.

Several, valued at $500, are by George Catlin, a Philadelphia lawyer who left his practice to live among the frontier Indians. Beside recording the history of 43 tribes between 1822 and 1836, Catlin has played a part in shaping the recent history of the Crow tribe, Krieger explained.

Indians "Went Wild."

Several years ago a group of Crow Indians visited the Museum and found among Catlin's paintings the portrait of an earlier member of their tribe, whose hair had grown to a length of 30 feet. "They still treasured the hair as a sacred tribal possession, and when they saw the warrior's picture they went wild," Kreiger said.

"They spent two days in the Museum, examining Catlin's portraits of their tribe, and several paintings by J. H. Sharp, who lived with the Crow tribe for nearly 20 years. They left only after they were given copies of the paintings."

"The copies joined the 30-foot hair as sacred possessions, and helped to develop a sense of the old historical pride of the tribe. Within the past two years their feeling of tribal unity has reached the stage where they have been granted one of their own members as superintendent of the reservation by the Office of Indian Affairs."

Farley Scoffs At Threat of Coalition Party

Differences Within Ranks Won't Affect Fate of New Deal, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 30.—Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, proclaimed the unity of his party tonight and asserted predictions of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, that a new party alignment would overthrow the New Deal were "a vain hope" born of desperation.

Democrats, Farley asserted in a radio address, will not become "a sort of trailer to the Republican bandwagon."

"We Democrats have had a few differences of opinion," he said, "but we are going to find the correct answer at our own council tables.

"The assumption of Senator Vandenberg that, because they disagreed with President Roosevelt on one issue, Democratic Senators are going to follow him (Vandenberg) into a bankrupt political organization that doesn't even know the United States is living in the twentieth century is too absurd for words."

Farley said the Republican Party "tried coalition in last fall's election" and failed. He said another election would find the Democratic committee working "with might and main" for a victory of the party's entire Congressional ticket, regardless of individual agreement with New Deal policies.

"Of course," he continued, "the Republicans have no disagreements, because they have no policies and no program. But if they should evolve a definite program, the resulting split between conservatives and progressives in the G. O. P. ranks will make the differences in our own party like nothing at all."

The Postmaster General dismissed the Vandenberg episode as "another meaningless gesture" and chided the senior Michigan Senator for "sitting there, mute as a mummy, while farmers were being swept into peonage, workingmen were being thrown into the breadlines, bank depositors were being carried to ruin and homeowners were watching the roof disappear from over their heads" when the depression struck.

He charged Republicans criticized "with tongue in cheek" and "would never dare" propose repeal of the bank deposit insurance law, Federal aid for agriculture, social security legislation or Federal regulation of stock and security markets.

The Republican Party, he said, "will never go on record in favor of ending the effort to abolish slum evils; it will never openly oppose the sincere democratic effort to secure for the working man a fair share of the bountiful wealth of this country." Farley came to Michigan to dedicate a postoffice at Saginaw.

2 Kidnaped Boys Escape, Start Hunt

Detroit Apathy Aids C. I. O. in Political Debut

culated that Lewis had summoned his aid to explain ramifications of the U. A. W. "Purge."

Never before has labor made a bid for political domination of the municipal government, largely because Detroit has known little of organized labor.

C. I. O. Alters Political Outlook.

The A. F. of L. never made substantial progress in the motor industry and the city for years has operated along open-shop lines.

With the U. A. W., however, all this has changed. The "open shop" is rarely mentioned in Detroit today and it is possibly one of the most labor-conscious cities of the country. When it is realized that the U. A. W. is but two years old, and that it is still going through the growing pains which come to all new organizations, the bid for control of the government of the motor city appears the more daring.

Lewis' strength in this campaign rests in a split opposition, with three candidates, all with an appeal to the average disinterested voter, in the field. The primary is of a nonpartisan character and for this reason neither the Democratic nor Republican organizations have entered the battle openly.

Faces Strong Vote-Getters.

Lewis' man, O'Brien, is campaigning against outstanding vote-getters. John W. Smith, president of the common council and twice mayor, seeks one of the nominations. Smith in nearly all of his previous campaigns has had the support of organized labor, and in this contest is backed by the American Federation of Labor.

Richard W. Reading, city clerk, is also a candidate for nomination, and, in 17 years of public service, has displayed great vote-getting proclivities.

City's Majority Foreign.

Clarence J. McLeod, former Representative and active member for years of the Committee for the District of Columbia, is the fourth contestant of importance. McLeod weathered the Democratic landslide of 1932 and 1934, but went down to defeat in 1936. He was, prior to last year, a formidable vote-getter.

Detroit is the only large city of the country in which a majority of the population are of foreign birth. There are 350,000 persons of Polish extraction here, about 50,000 Germans, and large groups of Belgians, Hungarians, Russians, and former citizens of nearly all of the European countries.

These groups in the past have lined up as units, but this situation no longer exists. They are hopelessly split along labor lines and efforts of leaders to swing them as units to Smith, Reading or McLeod have failed.

Apathy Aids Lewis.

The great factor in Lewis' favor in the contest is the apathy of the general public. There is no issue, other than that of the C. I. O., and despite efforts of the press and civic groups the average disinterested voter has not been aroused. The U. A. W. is something new and while the middle and upper classes are fearful of the outcome, the factory worker not associated with either the Lewis movement, or the A. F. of L., is displaying little interest.

There are 612,000 eligible voters for the primary, but fewer than 250,000 are expected to cast ballots.

The five candidates for the common council, sponsored by the C. I. O., are all active labor leaders. Richard Frankenstein directed the "march of Ford," when the U. A. W. started its organization campaign against the Ford Motor Co; Walter Reuther is one of the organizers in the plants of the Chrysler Corporation; Maurice Sugar is a labor lawyer; Tracy M. Doll and R. J. Thomas are both active leaders in the auto workers' union.

Detroit, unlike any other large city, functions under a charter which invests virtually all power in the mayor.

District Schools' Paper Wins First Class Rating

The paper, a monthly publication, was judged on quality of writing, selection and treatment of material, mechanics, proportion of students engaged in journalism, responsibilities of the staff, editorial achievement, innovations and circulation and advertising.

Canadians Plan Road to Alaska With Roosevelt

Thousands of Citizens Join Officials in Welcoming President.

be commenced as soon as the two governments found the time auspicious to get together.

In response to a toast to the President, offered by Hamber, Mr. Roosevelt made a brief and gracious speech at luncheon, ending with a toast to "the health of the King," which was drunk in champagne.

Roosevelt recalled he had known King George's father in the World War, asserting, "We had common interests, ranging from stamp collecting to navigation." He also paid a tribute to the Canadian premier, McKenzie King. Mr. Roosevelt promised to come back soon.

Hamber, in proposing the toast to the President, complimented him and expressed Canada's pleasure over the visit. The governor general of Canada, Lord Tweedsmuir, at Ottawa, sent the President a telegram of welcome and greetings.

British Columbia officials left no stone unturned to honor the President and make his brief visit pleasant. Thousands lined Victoria streets to cheer the President as he rode with Hamber and British Columbia's prime minister, T. D. Patullo. Other members of the British Columbia government followed in automobiles.

It was a holiday in Victoria and that city on the southwestern tip of Canada was gaily decorated, the Stars and Stripes interwoven with the Union Jack. School children, waving American and British flags, lined the last four blocks of the route to Government House.

The Presidential party left Seattle early this morning in a driving rain, a hangover from last night's severe storm off the coast, aboard the Navy's most modern and crack destroyers Phelps and Porter—the latter acting as an escort. Ten miles from Victoria the Canadian destroyers Fraser and Skeena arrived to escort the President into that harbor.

The Phelps, with the President aboard outside of the harbor, fired a salute, which the shore battery immediately returned as the two American destroyers slid into dock, all hands manning the rails.

At rigid attention on the dock was British Columbia's favorite regiment, the Princess Patricia Light Infantry—the famed "Pats" of the World War—in bright red coats, black trousers and white helmets. The band of the Fifth British Columbia Coastal Brigade played "The Star-Spangled Banner" as Mr. Roosevelt, with members of his family, stood at attention on the deck of the Phelps.

Members of the Presidential party were entertained at luncheon as guests of the Dominion government at the well known Empress Hotel, where toasts also were drunk to the President and the King.

Several thousand Canadians came down to the docks and lined the breakwater to bid Mr. Roosevelt farewell on his departure, including all of British Columbia's officialdom.

After the President boarded the Phelps, a large crowd gave a series of "hurrahs" and then commenced singing "For He Is a Jolly Good Fellow," as the destroyer pulled out into the stream.

Due to the all-day rain—it did not clear until the Presidential party neared Port Angeles on Puget Sound—some consideration was given to canceling the proposed tour of the Quinault Peninsula country tomorrow. But when the sun broke across Puget Sound after leaving Victoria, the President gave orders to adhere to the original schedule.

Mrs. Roosevelt left the Presidential party tonight. She was transferred from the Phelps to the Porter at Port Angeles to be rushed to Seattle to board an airplane for the East. She has a New York speaking engagement.

Black to Answer Klan Charge, Defend Record on Air Tonight

been reserved for his speech, although he may not use 10 minutes of it. He will speak over approximately 275 stations of the National, Columbia and Mutual broadcasting networks, as well as short waves for a transoceanic audience.

Clifford J. Durr, RFC attorney and brother-in-law of Black, at whose Virginia home the justice is stopping, arranged the radio time, and Kenneth H. Berkeley, Washington manager for the National Broadcasting Co., Harry C. Butcher, vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting Co., and William Dolph, Mutual Broadcasting Co., manager, announced the arrangements for their respective networks.

Berkley said Black will not be required to submit to the usual routine of supplying a written copy of his speech in advance. A stenographic transcript of his remarks will be made as he speaks.

Ickes Defends Black.

Black's first hint that he might make his reply by radio rather than a public statement to the press, was given to reporters at Norfolk. He said his statement would be made "so the public can hear what I have to say" and "so that no part of the press can fail to print all that I have to say."

Meantime, at a press conference yesterday, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, rose to the defense of the new justice. Ickes said Klan membership allegations against Black were "the same old red herring made to serve various purposes on different occasions."

"He has been appointed, hasn't he?" said Ickes. "Why don't you interview former President Hoover? I really think the greatest expert on the subject of the Ku Klux Klan is Mr. Hoover. He expected Klan support, and nobody criticized him."

Ickes said he was not suggesting Hoover was a Klan member.

"How outraged we can be when we have a chance to gore the other fellow's ox," said the Cabinet member.

Called Smith Supporter.

An Associated Press dispatch from Birmingham, Ala., quoted W. Cooper Green, Birmingham postmaster, as saying Black supported Al Smith for President in 1928.

Green said Black, in a statement at Montgomery, Ala., September 13, 1928, announced he would "support Smith and the Democratic Party."

Black could not be reached yesterday at the Durr home. It was said that he had left early for Washington. Apparently, he did not go to the Capitol or Supreme Court Building. Friends indicated he had retired to a place where he could prepare his speech without interruption.

Miss Dewson Resigns Democratic Party Post

By the Associated Press.

Miss Mary W. Dewson has resigned as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, asserting she could not continue responsibility for women's work on the committee while serving on the nonpartisan Social Security Board.

In accepting her resignation yesterday, Chairman James A. Farley of the committee said he did so "with keen regret."

Resign, Black Is Urged.

Boston, Sept. 30 (U.P.).—A demand for immediate resignation of Hugo L. Black from the Supreme Court was sought in a resolution presented today to Gov. Charles F. Hurley (Democrat), by Lieut. Gov. Francis E. Kelly (Democrat).

come into my hands and I can prove my innocence."

"Shocked" at Liquor Setup.

In its recommendations, the grand jury paid particular attention to the liquor situation, saying it was "shocked" to discover that in many instances minors and those intoxicated had been allowed to buy beer and ale.

"Deaths in murder and manslaughter cases often are directly traceable to alcoholic beverages," stated the jury's report, adding that many cases before the criminal court involved intoxication. The jury further recommended closer supervision of cafes selling beer and ale, and condemned sale of beer and ale on Sundays.

"The method of disbursement and issuance of court orders for payments of unsworn requisitions by the orphans' court and registrar of wills office may well invite dishonesty and carelessness on the part of a guardian," observed the jury report.

Guard Dispensary Receipts.

In its recommendation for abolition of the liquor control board, the jury suggested all dispensary receipts be taken to the police station each night, under police guard.

The grand jury recommended that "in the future, when cases involving irregularities of county funds are brought to the attention of the county commissioners, that they consult the chief of police and the State's attorney before accepting restitution."

All drivers involved in automobile accidents in which persons are injured should be compelled to submit to blood tests to determine whether they were intoxicated, the jury recommended.

The jury considered 80 cases, examined 137 witnesses and returned 75 indictments.

Ickes May Request More PWA Funds

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes intimated yesterday it might be necessary to ask Congress for additional funds to complete some of the larger PWA projects now under way, particularly if they should exceed original cost estimates.

He expressed optimism, however, that most projects for which partial or whole allocations have been made would be completed. He said no more allocations would be made for new projects as a result of President Roosevelt's recent order shutting off PWA spending.

Should Justice Black Resign?

Do American voters believe Justice Black should resign from the Supreme Court if it is proved that he has been a member of the Ku Klux Klan?

As a result of the national comment over the case, the American Institute of Public Opinion has asked voters from coast to coast to give their opinion.

Their answer will appear Sunday, exclusively, in The Washington Post. In addition, the current poll will report national sentiment on the Green-Lewis labor differences.

Baltimore, Sept. 30 (AP).—A chain of interstate compacts, covering reciprocity of States in matters of parole, extradition, and kindred subjects, eliminating "further Federal interference," was forecast today by Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor.

Modeled After The A. D. A.

Housing authorities have engaged in a number of conferences recently looking toward inauguration of the new Federal slum-clearance program. Some communities are reported to be ready to go ahead with demolition and building plans as soon as funds are available. Others are just beginning to realize the opportunity which is afforded to replace blighted areas by modern low-cost homes. In all cases, however, definite planning must await the appointment of a Federal Housing Administrator.

As discussion of the new program goes forward the objective of Congress in passing the Wagner housing act stands out ever more clearly. It is obvious that the Congressional aim was genuine slum clearance—the abolition of insanitary tenements and hovels and the rehousing of their inhabitants in comfortable yet economical homes. That sound policy is already being pursued locally by the District Alley Dwelling Authority.

The extent of the A. D. A.'s influence upon the new housing act has not been generally appreciated. When the Wagner bill was first introduced in the Senate there was a wide gap between its provisions and the local slum-reclamation program. As the measure was finally passed the two policies had become very similar. Both are now concentrated on the elimination of slums as a prerequisite to the construction of low-cost dwellings. Both aim at modest but substantially built homes for underprivileged groups, instead of elaborate models too costly to be of general application.

There can be little question that the work of the local agency was the basis used by Congress in remodeling the original Wagner bill. Exhibits of the A. D. A.'s work were hung in the Senate chamber during the debate. Its record became a vital part of the discussion. Indeed, some of the most far-reaching amendments to the Wagner bill were introduced by Senator Walsh, who has followed with keen interest the activities of the local agency.

In large measure, therefore, the policy evolved from the Congressional debate on housing reflects the experience of the Alley Dwelling Authority. And that is one of the chief reasons why attention is centering upon John Ihlder, executive director of the A. D. A., as the most logical choice for administrator of the national slum-clearance program.

Mr. Ihlder's experience in this comparatively new field of governmental activity has not been confined to Washington. The results of his work are also evident in Pittsburgh, Boston and Philadelphia. It is no mere coincidence that these cities, in which his practical methods of attacking the slums have taken root, are also among the first communities actually prepared to take immediate advantage of the Federal housing program.

Several very capable men have been mentioned for this important post. But it is only reasonable to expect that in making the final decision the President will be guided by the practical experience and achievements of the available candidates. In a field where guideposts are so few, and where so many costly mistakes have already been made, the man who has demonstrated that economical slum clearance is completely practical has an obvious claim to preference.

No More Parity Prices.

Secretary Wallace has a touching faith in the ability of the Government to achieve miracles. When one of his cherished plans for improving the lot of the farmer goes awry, he is always ready with new and more elaborate proposals to accomplish his ends. His latest plan is to assure the farmer the same proportion of the national income that he received prior to the World War. Whether this "parity income" is calculated over a 5 or 50 year period makes little difference, he says.

Mr. Wallace has suddenly awakened to the fact that the parity prices which the AAA tried to attain are "impractical." "I don't think there is any way of getting enough money out of the Treasury," he recently stated, "to give farmers parity prices during the next ten years for cotton, wheat, corn, hogs or any other product that is exported." It would be more candid to say that if we insist upon maintaining prices that are not adjusted to conditions of supply and demand, we must be prepared to witness the loss of our export trade in various farm products, or else pile up huge surpluses.

There never was a sound economic basis for the theory of parity for farm prices. As Mr. Wallace himself points out, the farmer is primarily concerned not with the prices of his products but with the income derived from sales. He may benefit by increased selling at lower prices, and starve on meager crops bringing high prices. Thus, if the Government aims to maintain the farmer in the position which he occupied prior to the war, income is a better test of his status than prices.

That, however, raises the question of how Mr. Wallace proposes to divide the national income in this way. If the attainment of parity prices seems too difficult, what reason is there to suppose that the task of adjusting the income of the entire farm population will be any easier to achieve? It would, on the contrary, seem to be harder. Finally, why should the Government want to set up a system of control that would interfere with economic adjusiments due to the changing conditions of demand and supply?

This latest suggestion is perhaps the most impracticable objective that the Secretary of Agriculture has evolved in his restless search for an agricultural panacea.

No Educational Barriers.

There will be little sympathy with the proposal that nonresident pupils be excluded from Washington schools. It is a foregone conclusion that Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee will have ample support in Congress to defeat such a measure if it should be offered by the District Commissioners. And many local residents will doubtless take the same view.

Free education in the Nation's Capital ought to be taken for granted. Regardless of the fact that it serves as a place of permanent residence for a large population, Washington as a city belongs to the entire country. Its national significance should not be ignored even in such local matters as education.

The trend of Washington's growth is toward suburban development. A constantly larger percentage of people who consider themselves Washingtonians are moving to Maryland or Virginia communities just across the line. As recently pointed out by the National Resources Committee, there is need for greater co-operation between these suburbs and the District. To move in the opposite direction by excluding nonresident pupils from District schools would be a curious reversion to provincialism that would be humiliating to the District as well as to Congress.

That unhappy suggestion arose only because of the acute financial needs of the local schools. The Commissioners are trying desperately to reduce the proposed school budget without lowering the quality of education here. It is quite natural that they should examine the status of nonresident children. But it is no less obvious that they should seek adjustment of financial burdens and not the erection of educational barriers.

The cost of educating nonresident pupils has been estimated at $250,000 by Superintendent Ballou. That expense certainly should not fall upon local taxpayers. Since free education here is one of the advantages which Congress has bestowed upon a considerable number of families who pay their taxes elsewhere, the expense might well be borne by the Federal Treasury. An appeal to Congress on that basis would be far more reasonable than any request for exclusion of nonresidents.

If Congress refuses to pay for educating the children it has properly invited to attend school here, it should at least assess those costs against the nonresident families benefiting from this service. In that event, tuition should be charged whether or not the breadwinner sending children across the line to school is employed in the District. And the charges should be equivalent to the actual cost of educating a child in the various grades, so far as that can be ascertained.

Patently, however, the tuition proposal is the less desirable way of meeting the problem. If the case is carefully handled, it should not be difficult to convince Congress that it should finance the special educational privileges it has established here.

Japan's Lame Explanation.

Tokyo's reply to the American note of September 22 which protested the Japanese threat to bombard Nanking is an utterly inadmissible document. At no point do its arguments rise above the specious. At no point does it make out a case for Japan's tactics in China which the world can accept.

The Japanese note ignores the fact that Secretary Hull in his stiff message to Tokyo not only protested the threatened bombardment of Nanking but also took a strong stand against Japan's general policy of aerial warfare. "This Government holds the view," he informed officials at Tokyo, "that any general bombing of an extensive area wherein there resides a large populace is unwarranted and contrary to principles of law and humanity."

That statement of principle Japan does not even take up. Instead, Foreign Minister Hirota's note emphasizes the allegation that Nanking "is exceptionally strongly fortified and . . . is the most important strategic base of military operations for the Chinese forces." In view of this, "the bombing of the military facilities and equipment located in and around the said city is a necessary and unavoidable measure for the attainment of the military objectives of the Japanese forces."

Even if Japan's allegations concerning Nanking were true, which is very much open to question, the repeated bombing of that city with the resultant slaughter of noncombatants would still be inexcusable.

At The Hague Conference of 1923-24 Japan was one of the nations which specifically indorsed a draft convention prohibiting the bombing of cities where circumstances made it impossible to attack military objectives without indiscriminate destruction of the civilian population. And at the world disarmament conference of 1932 Japan went further and gave its wholehearted support to a proposal that air bombing of every kind be prohibited.

To be sure, neither The Hague Convention nor the later proposal ever came into force. Nonetheless, the distinction between military forces and noncombatants is one which antedates by many years these more recent efforts to limit the horrors of war.

The Japanese reply brazenly ignores that distinction. "Bombing operations by Japanese forces," says the Tokyo note, "will not be aimed at noncombatants." The implication is that so long as it is Japan's intentions to bomb only military concentration points no one should object if, incidentally, noncombatants are killed.

How that works out in practice the world has already learned to its horror. Japan's bombing planes have not limited their activities to the vicinity of Nanking. Cities as far removed from the major theaters of war as Canton and Hankow have been made the victims of inexcusable attacks.

With such tactics the United States is and will remain completely out of sympathy. The curious request of Japan that this Nation "co-operate with the measures taken by the Imperial Japanese Government" demands a prompt and unmistakable rejection. We cannot, except with dishonor and the ultimate destruction of our interests, agree to run to cover whenever the Japanese militarists want to wreak their vengeance on some Chinese city where Americans are stationed.

Yet the developing situation in the Far East does demand co-operation by the United States—not with Japan, to make possible the success of its aggression—but with all the nations that are co-signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, so as to prevent that aggression from being successful.

The High Price Of Meat.

Housewives who have been complaining about the high price of meats and threatening to boycott their butchers may be surprised to hear that some butchers are quite as resentful of high prices as their customers. Several thousand retail kosher butchers located in New York and vicinity are, indeed, threatening to close their shops in protest against excessively high wholesale meat prices.

It is hard to see what useful purpose could be accomplished by a strike of these retailers, except to call attention to the fact that the consumer is not the only victim of high living costs. That, unfortunately, is a fact usually overlooked by irate housewives. They are likely to take for granted that the extra toll exacted from them remains snugly in the pockets of the retailer who collects it.

As a matter of fact, the retailer is sometimes the chief sufferer from an advance of prices due to circumstances he cannot control. His profits come out of the difference between the wholesale prices he pays for goods and the prices at which he sells them. If the former rise, his margin of profit shrinks and his own selling prices have to be raised to restore it. Then if the consumer "strikes" against the increase and refuses to buy, his total volume of sales declines and he may be worse off than before.

In the present case, not only retailers but meat packers and all intermediate distributors who are charging higher prices are also paying higher prices for livestock products they buy. The farmer is the chief beneficiary. However, the farmer is not to blame for a situation that is directly traceable to market conditions making for high prices. He is receiving excellent returns for high-grade cattle and hogs because supplies offered for sale in recent months have been greatly reduced as compared with a year ago, while buying demands have been well sustained by improved purchasing power.

The recent pronounced declines in the number of both cattle and hogs slaughtered is explained by the good crops of feed grains just beginning to be available for fattening and finishing stock. A year of extreme scarcity of feedstuffs, due to severe drought and to some extent to AAA restriction programs, resulted in forced slaughtering of livestock and built up surplus supplies. Now these surpluses are being drawn down and cattle and hogs are at the same time being withheld for fattening. In other words, the delayed process of converting corn into beef and pork has not yet caught up with the demand.

In the next few months the livestock thus withheld will be coming on the market and the scarcity will be relieved to some extent. It is plain, however, that current high prices are the result of supply conditions over which retail butchers have little if any control. There is, of course, the possibility that consumer "strikes" may so reduce the demand for meat as to force a cut in the prices paid for livestock and subsequent reductions all along the line. But since supplies are limited and buyers better able to pay, it seems probable that the high prices are here to stay for a time.

Alas, alas, it has come to pass that even King Cotton must bow to a dictatorship.

Justice Hugo L. Black says he isn't talking because he has nothing to say. It's the first time.

Would Rejoin D. C.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold L. Ickes wishes to assist the thickly populated areas of adjacent Maryland and Virginia. Seven-eighths of the citizens of the strip of land south of Potomac River, in Virginia ask him to use his good and powerful influence to get us back in the District of Columbia by offering to Virginia $10,000,000 of PWA funds for an outright grant to the original land of the Federal District. The price will have to be very attractive to get the Legislature at Richmond to ratify the transfer of title.

If we were back in the District we would have more and better schools, more policemen, a paid fire department (we now have 350 volunteer firemen). We need paved hard-surfaced streets with curbing and sewers. We have one large open sewer on South Royal street, very insanitary; it will cost $40,000 to cover it. This open sewer has been on that street for 165 years; our taxpayers cannot afford to cover it.

Our city has 34 dangerous railroad grade crossings; one of them crosses the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway at Wilkes street. The consensus of opinion is, it should be eliminated. J. S. ACTON.

Courageous O'Mahoney.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the President intentionally snubs Senator O'Mahoney and the other conscientious Senators, it furnishes additional proof that he is a poor loser and also is vindictive.

The Senator has been one of the President's stanchest friends; that he had a conscientious objection to making "yes" men of the highest court was to his everlasting credit.

He is supposed to represent the people of Wyoming who elected him, not the President and his fawning administration. "Home first, the world afterward." If Congress were composed of members with the high-mindedness of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, the country would be better off.

This conscientious Senatorial "lip service to my (Roosevelt's) objectives" indicates what would take place if any President of the United States ever should be given the power of Hitler or Mussolini. Let the country beware!

Economic Leadership.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The vulnerable point in the New Deal is not that it is new, but that it is not. It's sailing under false colors—saying one thing and doing another—trying to justify means by ends which the means do not actually serve.

Nevertheless, as a matter of results, the Democratic position is not today vulnerable to Republican attack with 1929 so fresh in memory. As long as 1893 stood as the foremost depression year and seemed a Democratic product, the Nation was normally Republican, usually on a tariff basis empirically established.

Today, however, the "pudding-proving" idea is not valid, at least not as a Republican argument. It goes rather for untried proposals—even for a do-everything party rather than a do-nothing party—because the orthodox ideas have been tried and found wanting. However mistrustful of Mr. Roosevelt, the public in this or any other democracy is certainly not in a stand-pat or reactionary mood. Neither an imitation New Deal nor an anti-New Deal will get anywhere as an opposition.

Real and effective political leadership, therefore, cannot be stereotyped. It must be thoroughly intellectual in its appeal and get right down to cases, for we're all from Missouri today and want to know not what, but how and why! So it's going to pay politically to ring out the old and ring in the new wherever it can be shown that this involves ringing out the false and ringing in the true.

Economics is a living, not a formal science. Its problems cannot be left to technicians to solve at leisure, for they are being lived now, and America will be falling behind the procession if her political leadership doesn't get out in front where the economists are arguing and make them get their premises straightened out. Intellectual statemanship must displace the attempt to team up demagogues and academicians in a "brain trust" attempt to displace constitutional democracy.

An Emergency In Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Returning to Washington today after an absence of several weeks in the West, I was concerned to notice in the press accounts of the emergency that exists in Washington in regard to the lack of proper lunches for 8,000 school children. It is a situation that demands a remedy not only in the present emergency but for all time to come.

But there is much more to this situation than the immediate hunger of these 8,000 children, regrettable though that may be. For every child who comes to school without a lunch, or with inadequate food there is a family that lacks the bare essentials of life, for it is certain that no father—no mother—would permit a child to go to school without a lunch were there material for that lunch in the home. It all goes back to the question of inadequate relief in the District—a need which Community Chest officials have preached for the last five years and for which we have endeavored in vain to raise additional funds.

Our family agencies are being compelled to turn away families asking for help because there are no more funds—no way to obtain the necessary money without arbitrarily taking it away from some other equally worthy family—some family whose children, in turn, would have to go to school without lunch.

Agencies affiliated with the Community Chest are doing a magnificent job with the funds available. Overtime hours and extra work are the lot of the workers in these agencies—cheerfully given in order to compensate, as far as possible, for the money shortage. But they can work only so long—can give only so much—and we know that in addition to all that they are doing, there are still families going to pieces; still children needing foster homes; families being set out on the sidewalks because of lack of rent; more sick people in their homes than the limited number of visiting nurses can possibly find time to see.

The case of these hungry school children is an emergency. It is an emergency for which the whole city of Washington is responsible, because the city has failed to heed the needs of families which have, in turn, resulted in the need of these children for lunches. It is an emergency that can be prevented in future years by making proper provision for the families from which these children come and making that provision this year. It is an emergency that should be remembered when the annual campaign of the Community Chest takes place in November—the campaign which offers Washington its opportunity to prevent the recurrence of such an emergency.

CLARENCE PHELPS DODGE,
President, the Community Chest.

Washington, Sept. 30.

Disappointed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Friday evening's street dance fiasco reminds one of the "shows" we put on when we were young. We were bold, and put signs out on the front lawn, "Big Show," for our little circus performances which took in the family cat and dog and perhaps a parrot, if we were lucky. It was quite evident that the boys who did the talking on the radio at the Water Gate about the wonderful carnival for Friday were either led astray or were "left holding the bag."

I am just a resident of Washington, do not own a yacht and am not in the know about these things, but when there is so much publicity about an affair (e does expect something and would be willing to pay a little to see it. I stood in the little triangle opposite the District Building and, incidentally, The Post Building, to watch the Queen start off on her visit to the dancing spots. What a dreary procession; it reminded one of the odd night funeral processions of one of the Balkan countries.

Now, if there are to be Queens, why not make them queenly? Surely there are some costume companies in Washington who could provide a handsome cloak for the Queen to wear atop the tonneau of the very handsome automobile in which she rode and for the maids of honor with her. Her black velvet was no doubt very proper for any private parties she might have been attending afterward, but not for such a poorly lighted region as the Avenue, and the red flares only added to the gloom.

For Mr. Harlan Miller's paradoxes: No music for dancing and right around the corner a picture all about the cruel nonemployment of musicians!

Where are the old-fashioned prosperous citizens who were not ashamed of being prosperous and lent their vigorous and jolly personalities to making things go with true human interest?

AUDE BELL.

"Provincial Washington."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speculation on the reason for President Roosevelt's trip to the North Pacific slope and through the nearby States at this time is accelerated by Mr. Franklyn Waltman's dispatches to The Post written from the President's special train. I am not convinced that the situation is involved in mystery, nevertheless. It seems to me that Mr. Roosevelt simply wants to ride to get away from Washington.

The National Capital is a very soothing and attractive place to Vice President Garner, who retires every night at 10; but big-city folk like President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and Shipping Board Chairman Kennedy must find its atmosphere a "pain in the neck." Hence their manifest desire to get away so often as to be almost continually going.

I think the President wanted to see his grandchildren in Seattle, found that the "distance lent enchantment," because so great from provincial Washington, and that all things else about the trip are incidental. RIENZI B. LEMUS.

Clarification Of Speak.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I refer to your "Plea to Philologists" of September 25 and to the first-line reading, "If Henry James ever keeps a speak . . ." Surely you have not forgotten that "speak" formerly meant speak-easy! In this particular instance, "speak" is probably a general term for bar, saloon or pub.

In the old days bartenders were noted for their ability to carry on an interesting, although not always uplifting, conversation, and lonely souls found solace therein. Does this clarify matters?

Depression Idyll.

MAYBE I shouldn't write about the expedition with such authority, for I was only with them in the woods five days.

The expedition sprouted from the recent depression. It was one of the countless million ideas people had for beating it. In this instance three young men, one a recently graduated geologist, sat by a stove in a Virginia town and decided they'd better go to the woods than suffer further the ignominy of living off their families.

It was the geologist who got down to details. Let us, he suggested, go prospecting for the gold that, traditionally, at least, is in the nearby mountains.

Two days later the three young men had in hand a store of blankets, pots, pans and two iron beds. They had acquired a great larder of preserved goods from the pantries of their homes and had placed, in one communal till, all of their financial resources, exactly $50. A house had been secured for $10 a month. Someone in town lent them a truck. They moved to the mountain.

The house was in a picturesque setting at foot of the mountain which rose like a lost, rocky castle from surrounding land. The three arrived, set up house and regarded their status. After sundry disbursements, the till showed $40. The burden of this piece is to demonstrate what $40 will do, rather than to demonstrate that you can't beat a depression by attacking the gold problem at its source.

Of course, I don't know what they did upon arriving, nor exactly how things proceeded in the ensuing two months. I can only report the state of affairs after I got out there. It was cold when I reached the house, late one day in December, 1932. They had made the place actually habitable, using only two rooms of the five that were afforded, one for sleeping, the other for a kitchen.

In the sleeping quarters were the two beds with clean sheets. A fire blazed on an open hearth. A stack of wood was to one side. A small writing table was in a corner. A phonograph with the lid open on its harsh mouth was at the foot of the bed. The geologist sat in front of the fire in a chair with a cigarette ad on the back. He smoked a pipe and his face was deep in peace.

* * *

His comrades, he said, would be gone for a few days, and in the interim he would spend the time at rest from recent labors. He had been tussling with the earth and had reached certain conclusions: Gold had been there and was there yet to some extent. Men had figured it out that way before and during the Civil War. The black holes still in the ground proved that.

And he himself had found gold traces. He kept these in a small vial on the mantel. Often he held it up to his eyes, turning it slightly to watch the glint of the metal.

"You never could get it out with your hands," he would say, "and there's not enough there to pay a company to bring machinery in."

That was the last I heard of gold in connection with the expedition. The face of things began changing. I had expected to find a bustling gold rush camp and now began sensing a place of quiet retreat, such as nothing short of money could have established. If Saul set out in search of donkeys and stumbled on a kingdom, a day of strange turn-abouts had come again. The geologist was settled down, with the assurances of a man no more to roam. It was all too engaging.

I never heard the subject of money, and the table always groaned. He would shave before the evening meal, brush his hair, put on his coat. Learned professors of economics and the professional arrangers of family budgets would have choked or asked him whence this manna fell—when only $40 was available two long months before. I didn't inquire, for the answer soon was apparent.

First, consider the elemental needs: Shelter, food and firewood. The first two months' rent was paid from the till. Firewood could be hewn from the woods, near the door. And the farmers were about as pressed for money—money you can feel with your fingers—as was anyone.

An added factor was the traditional neighborliness of the farmers. As said, the countryside was sparsely settled and a neighbor was something to be prized. So the good people brought in chickens, cans of preserves and hunks of meat.

* * *

Things finally reached such a pass that they ventured out only for exercise, just a trifle of air, they'd say. This sent them through woodlands ablaze with holly. And the paling green of mistletoe, high in the trees.

Motorists would see the expedition, walking the road, the greens of mistletoe and holly hung like a Christmas premonition on their shoulders. The motorists would think of Christmas and of how pretty those greens would look in the windows. Some of them must have been tourists, miles from home and with no chance to decorate a window. But people like to buy green things at Christmas time.

This aided things tremendously.

Of course there was the hunting feature. In the last stages, the expedition sometimes roused itself from the fire long enough to kill some rabbits and quail, "birds" as they're known in that country. This called for no extreme effort.

On the 1st of February, the landlord asked for his house. But that, you will agree, proved nothing so far as the expedition was concerned. They had lived well, for some four months, on $40. They had found no gold, but who would want gold under such conditions?

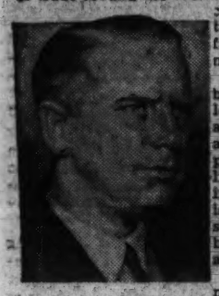
Facts About Fascism.

THERE HAS BEEN no special demand for it, but my advice to the National Association of Manufacturers and all the chambers of commerce and boards of trade around the country which have been viewing communism with such picturesque alarm is to view fascism the same way and make it convincing.



In this manner they could bust up the play around the left wing which holds that all businessmen, or, anyway, all men in big business, are pining for a dictatorship like Mussolini's or Hitler's, in which the working man is forbidden to organize or strike and may even be forbidden to quit his job as an individual.

True enough, the working man has few liberties in Italy and Germany, and there may be some big operators in American industry who would like to adopt that portion of fascism which deals with labor. But that isn't all there is to fascism, and every intelligent businessman knows that business also loses its rights under a dictator.

Under fascism the big shot tells the boss how many men he must employ and how much to pay them, regulates the volume of business that he may handle and regulates his prices and profits.

• • • •

IF A DICTATOR needs money—and they are always broke from overspending on arms or public works—he doesn't bother to call together the poor monkeys who compose his parliament and get them to pass a tax law. He just takes it wherever he finds it, and inasmuch as business always keeps some on hand as fuel to keep the chimneys hot, the dictator is always sending some flunkey around with a satchel to put the bite on the businessman.

Sure, in the early days of fascism and naziism the businessmen, and especially the heavy operators, thought these dictatorships were the answer to their prayer.

The Communists were raising merry hell, wrecking plants, wasting and destroying material, pushing people around, slugging, shooting and burning. They were as tough and dirty in their ways as the Black Shirts and Brown Shirts were to be when they came along, a fact to remember when some Communist starts beefing about the brutalities practiced on his comrades in the crazy countries.

But the Italian and German businessmen didn't forget that once their dictators obtained absolute control, business, like labor, would be ruled by the whim of the head man or some accredited deputy who might be a terrible thief and grafter.

Political appointees with absolute authority are pretty much the same breed of cats in all countries, and businessmen in Italy and Germany could a tale unfold, were they not afraid, of no-good relatives of government agents dropped into nominal jobs at big salaries, of kick-backs and commissions and larceny the like of which not even Chicago has ever imagined.

• • • •

IN THE NEWSPAPER business in Italy, fascism, has compelled the publishers to retain on their staffs some of the smelliest old bums that ever tossed a dram and keep them year after year, although they are absolutely worthless, because they are members of the Fascist Journalists Syndicate or union.

The publishers may have been hot for fascism when it started—some of them certainly were—but it is no fun now. They can't hire or fire without permission from a deputy who holds the Duce's say-so in such matters, they print what they are told to print and where they are told to print it, their white paper is rationed according to the favor of some party member who doesn't have to give any reasons for curtailing the supply, their advertising is controlled, and they don't feel good.

Big business in this country doesn't want fascism, but, like the American Legion a few years ago, it has hated Communists so noisily and exclusively that the Bolos are able to make a fairly convincing charge of inferential fascism. It takes only a few words to undo this, as the legion did, by adding the words fascism, naziism and dictatorship in every resolution against communism and every speech on the subject.

The plan should be to create one front against all of them, instead of standing in the middle and fighting them on all sides. In practical effect they are all about the same, and it is always a pleasure to remind them of this resemblance, because it drives them nuts.

There has been much criticism of the fact that in that painting George Washington is standing up in the boat.

You're telling me!

Why did you depict George standing in the boat? Was there any evidence that he stood up during that trip across the Delaware?

No, but there was no evidence that he sat down, either.

Why, in the absence of evidence either way, did you depict him standing?

All heroes look more convincing standing than sitting.

All heroes?

Well, except heroes of sit-down strikes.

• • • •

As a matter of fact, isn't it entirely possible that Washington did stand up in the boat, Mr. Leutze?

I sincerely think so, although it may not have been from choice.

What do you mean?

Well, transportation had its curious ethics even in those days. Maybe nobody would get up and give him a seat.

But Washington was the Father of His Country.

Yes, but on a night like that you wouldn't get up for your mother.

• • • •

The National Park Commission would sit down on an escalator, with or without ice.

Washington was in his senses, was he not?

Just ask those British!

And if he chose to cross the Delaware standing in an open boat you think he would have done so?

George Washington would have crossed the Delaware standing in a kiddie-kar if he had made up his mind to.

• • • •

If you were to do "Washington Crossing the National Park—beg pardon—the Delaware" over again, would you do it the same way, Mr. Leutze?

No; I would put in two Washingtons, one standing and one sitting.

Wouldn't that be stretching things?

Memorandum.

Miss Doolittle:

I find it expedient to make a trip over the district at this time, but I am anxious to keep the office open during my absence as I want my constituents to know that I am always at their service. Please have the office open every day and keep me informed of all that occurs.

Incidentally, Mr. Lucius Hyves announced yesterday as an opponent to Mayor Aufton Fitz, who is running for re-election. The election will be held next month and I shall probably not be able to return until after the election as I feel it imperative to visit as many of my constituents as possible before Congress convenes. You may let it be known that I consider it a solemn duty to consult my constituents on matters of importance which will come before Congress at the next session, and to sound out sentiment as to a special session. Should the Mayor's race be mentioned, you can inform all interested parties that I will probably be absent for some time.

I expect to be in Detour a day or two after you arrive in Petunia and you may write me there.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,

Detour.

Dear Congressman:

I arrived yesterday and this morning Mrs. Fannie Sitz came by to find out where you are. When I told her that you had gone over the district in the interest of your constituents, she said it was too bad that you had to leave just as the Mayor's election was getting so exciting. She said she believed most of your friends want Fitz, although she supposed some of them want Hyves. She said she would rather have Fitz than Hyves and had come to ask you to say you want Fitz too, as Fitz has always been for you. When I informed her you were in Detour she told me to write you that if you remain there for a few more days she will come over to see you about it.

She is composing a poem about Fitz which she wants you to approve and she said she would also like to link you with Fitz in the poem. I told her that on account of your position I didn't think you would state a preference for either Fitz or Hyves; but she said that I evidently didn't understand you as you always take a stand, and besides, if Mr. Farley could say who he wanted for Mayor of New York why couldn't you say who you want for Mayor of Petunia?

What shall I tell Mrs. Sitz?

Your secretary,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.

Special Delivery,
Detour, Sept. 14, 1937.

Miss Willa Doolittle,
Petunia.

Dear Miss Doolittle:

Please call Mrs. Sitz at once and tell her I regret exceedingly that it will be impossible to see her in Detour as I am leaving immediately on a very important mission. You can also ask her tactfully not to include me in the poem.

If anyone else asks you for my position just tell them you feel sure that I am for the best man. You may write me at Morning Glory, where I am going to dedicate a WPA project.

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, Sept. 15, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
c/o General Delivery,
Morning Glory.

Dear Congressman:

I telephoned Mrs. Sitz as you instructed and asked her not to include you in the poem. I told her that you were certain that the poem would be a welcome contribution to literature but that just at the moment you did not prefer any further publicity. She said that she appreciates your inane modesty and she was delighted to hear that you approve of the poem. She also said that she would tell her friends the good news of your preference for Fitz. She continued to say a good deal more and before I could suggest that you had not stated a preference she hung up. I thought it might get mixed up more if I called back so I am writing you about it instead.

Today Mr. Clovis Kluck, who operates the Kluck Chicken Farm just outside Petunia, and whose employes sat down on him last spring, you remember, came to see you about Mr. Hyves. He said that if Mayor Aufton Fitz got re-elected he would try to extend the city limits to take in the chicken farm and raise his taxes and that Hyves was the best man anyhow.

He said he didn't see how any sensible man could prefer Fritz to Hyves and he wondered how you stood. I told him I felt sure that you were for the best man. He said that was fine and he felt all along that you were for Hyves since Hyves always supported you. He said that he would spread the good news. When I told him that you were at Morning Glory, he said he thought he would drive over there day after tomorrow to talk to you about Hyves. It looks like a misunderstanding somewhere. What must I do about it?

Your secretary,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.

Morning Glory, Sept. 16, 1937.

Miss Willa Doolittle,
Petunia.

Dear Miss Doolittle:

Please call Mr. Kluck at once and tell him that I have left Morning Glory.

If anyone else asks you about the Mayor's race tell them that I am so busy at the moment with other important matters in the district that I haven't had time to come to a conclusion, but you feel sure that I will announce myself in due course, as is my long established custom.

You may write me at Evening Star Station, where I am going for a few days to lay a cornerstone.

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, Sept. 17, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Evening Star Station.

Dear Congressman:

The Mayor's race is getting everyone excited and they keep mentioning you. From the way they talk you would think you were in the race too. What makes politics like that?

Mr. Slim Slack was in this morning and said that they were telling it around that you were for both parties. Some said you wanted Fitz and some said you wanted Hyves. He also said that Hezekiah Hawks had come all the way over from Detour to spread poison against you and was telling everybody that you hadn't done anything in Detour but shake hands and try to explain yourself and that you were just running away from the Mayor's race. I told him you were sounding out sentiment on a special session and he asked why would Congress want to do that to the people. He said there was enough trouble going on in the world today already. When I told him you were at Evening Star Station he said he thought that he and Mayor Fitz would drive over to have a conference with you.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz also came in with her poem which she called a sextant, being a six-lined poem, and told me to send it to you, as it was appearing in the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette today. Here it is:

Fitz.
By Fannie Sitz.

For a greater Petunia it befits
To have a man who thinks, and it's
None other than amiable Aufton Fitz;
Here we'll have no party splits,
We need a man of brilliant wits,
So give us Fitz, O give us Fitz!

Mrs. Sitz said she was disturbed about the rumors that you were getting out of Petunia just to miss the Mayor's race. She said she knew this wasn't typical of you and would like to hear you say so. I told her that she could depend upon you to take a stand always on everything and she said that made her feel better.

Your secretary,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.

Miss Willa Doolittle,
Petunia.

Dear Miss Doolittle:

I am leaving Evening Star Station sooner than expected as I must be in Biddlesville tomorrow to deliver an address at the opening of court. Please inform Mr. Slack that I regret not being able to see him just now, but duty must come before pleasure.

I approve of your telling Mrs. Sitz that I always take a stand, and you may give this information to all who come to the office. You may brand Mr. Hawks' charges as too ridiculous to warrant a serious reply.

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, Sept. 20, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
c/o General Delivery.
Biddlesville.

Dear Congressman:

Mrs. Fannie Sitz was back this morning very angry. The supporters of Mr. Hyves got out a circular answering her poem with a poem for Hyves. She brought it up here and wanted to know what you are going to do about it, and here it is:

Hyves.
By Fancie Ztis

Yes, he will clean up all the dives
And make them safe for men and wives,
The brave and noble Lucius Hyves;
Here we want real happy lives,
So help Petunia men and wives
And give them Hyves, O give them Hyves!

She said they had not only imitated her poem but had committed mayhem on her name or something. She said she was mad all the way through, so I guess she was pretty mad.

Mrs. Sitz said that there must be a law against such imitations and if there wasn't she would insist on your passing a law forbidding imitations of her poems by Congress. She also declared that if Congress could forbid imitations of other things it could certainly prevent imitations of genuine poems. She said imagine anyone wanting Hyves for two years. When I told her you would be in Biddlesville soon she said to write and tell you to wait there until she came over, as she wanted you to make a statement at once and she had her ideas about it.

They are still getting out rumors about how you stand. What must I do?

Miss Willa Doolittle,
Petunia.

Dear Miss Doolittle:

I have decided that this is the ideal time for me to discuss the farm problem with the Department of Agriculture. Having just been over part of the district I have valuable information to impart as well as several ideas. I also have some other important business that requires immediate attention, including discussion of a possible special session with a few other leaders.

Please convey my deep regrets to Mrs. Sitz and inform her that I am reluctant to leave for Washington again having just spent 8 strenuous months in the Capitol, but no sacrifice is too great to make for my constituents.

Brand all derogatory rumors as being completely without foundation.

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, Sept. 23, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman:

I conveyed your message to Mrs. Sitz when she dropped in again this morning. I told her you had to go to Washington to give the Dept. of Agriculture some ideas and that you also had some important business to transact. When I mentioned your deciding about a special session she said she couldn't worry with Congress now with the Mayor's election going on in Petunia but she was sure you knew best. She said she guessed they needed you in Washington with so many other leaders out of town just now.

Mr. Kluck also came by and when I told him you had gone to Washington he seemed annoyed He said he thought that the Dept. of Agriculture already had enough ideas about what to do to them without you putting any more in their heads. He also said that if you didn't get on back here and do something it looks like Petunia will have Fitz for 2 more years and you ought to think about your own election next year. I told him that you were always more interested in the welfare of your constituents than you were in yourself, but I didn't catch what he said as he left the room.

When do you expect to return?

Your secretary,

Dear Miss Doolittle:

It is impossible to say at the moment when I can return. You may continue to inform all who call at the office that I am very busy in important conferences with other leaders here.

Keep me informed of all that happens.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Congressman:

Mayor Fitz came in early this morning beaming all over. He said that Mr. Hyves had just received a wire offering him a job in Washington and he was withdrawing from the race to take it. The Mayor said to congratulate you on being such a fast worker and that he had to admit that you were pretty smart in spite of everything. I don't understand why he said you were smart, but I just agreed.

He told me to ask you when you were coming home as he was going to arrange with the Petunia Progressive Citizens Band to give you a kind of extemporaneous homecoming.

Dark Days

By

'Famine.'

THE GREAT FAMINE of Ireland was a night that had no dawn. And as that night fell on blighted fields, a dark shroud enveloped the country—a shroud of eternal shame.

To this day that shame bites at us and fills our souls with hatred. If our forefathers had only been men then. If they had only scorned the policy of "peace at any price" preached by the demagogue O'Connell. If they had only spurned the obedience-to-law dictum glibly mouthed by their clergy. If, instead of adhering to the blind craven pacifism of the Repeal Association, they had only cried out "My voice is my sword," and died like men!

But they did not, and their shame is still ours. And for two long dreary years—two years in which their bodies turned black like their blighted gardens—skeletons of men were to be seen tottering from thatched, silent hovels in the East, West and South, howling for food like wild animals and dying like midges on a summer eve.

Monstrous diseases took possession of the living fed on such offal as dogs, cats, Indian meal, seawood and green nettles. What famine started soon passed into the still more destructive force of cholera, cancer and typhoid; until soon, corpses became so numerous they were cast like the carcasses of fever-stricken swine into common pits. A trap coffin carried each corpse to the pit. It dumped its load in the hole and returned for another. More than a million died by the remote roadways of Ireland, the stain of grass on their blackened lips.

WRITING OF THAT time, Liam O'Flaherty gives us in "Famine" the most searing, biting story ever to be written of that horrible catastrophe that resulted in the great wave of Irish immigration to these shores—a catastrophe that would in the years to follow cause the London Times to exult: "The Celts are going, going with a vengeance. Soon an Irishman will be as rare in Connemara as a Red Indian on the shores of Manhattan. If this goes on long, Ireland will become very English and the United States very Irish. The Celt goes to yield to the Saxon . . . for the interests of luxury and humanity . . ."

"Famine" is a brutally frank story and the author does not mince words. And though he blames English misrule for the extent of the devastation, he also lays the knout heavily across the bared backs of the Irish bishops—"preaching peace and obedience to law that gave them fat bellies and rich vestments" . . . and he exposes the chicancery of the native profiteers, the swindling "gombeen" man who sanctimoniously counted beads with the one hand, the while they picked the pockets of the poor with the other.

Black Valley, the scene of the O'Flaherty novel, was representative of almost any peasant Irish community of that day. Its inhabitants, living in a country district as remote from thought and the instincts of civilization as the nomadic tribes of the desert, wrung a hard living from the unyielding earth. Their principal food was the potato. All other crops were sold to meet rack rents imposed by insolent landlords. The first bolt fell on them in 1846; the second struck in '47. Overnight, Black Valley found its potato crop withered to the last stalk . . .

To understand the helplessness of the Black Valley folk when that calamity occurred is to understand the disintegration of the nineteenth century Irish politically.

• • • •

THE TURN OF the century sounded the death-knell of revolutionary hopes and marked the Union with England. There were no wars and the population of Ireland increased rapidly. The feudal landlords became bored, as feudal landlords will in a warless society. They looked upon the serfs as conquered enemies and consequently plundered them. Curiously enough, Irish aspirations during that period were not nationalistic. Led by their clergy and politicians, the peasants merely yelled for political emancipation for Irish Catholics. And in 1829 they gained their objective. But, ironically, emancipation, once gained, proved a boomerang. For, in order to achieve this end, the Irish politician, O'Connell, made a deal with the English. He agreed to the abolishment of the Forty Shilling Freeholder. And the Forty Shilling Freeholder was the only bulwark of the peasant against the landlord. Its repeal resulted in an immediate increase in evictions.

Politicians and clergy were now in a tight spot. The peasants had asked for bread and they had been given a stone. But rascally leaders are capable of any deception. And so to divert the attention of the masses from their sorry plight, the politicians clamored for repeal of the Union. And the great ignorant masses took up the howl. They backed the politicians to a man. When, therefore, O'Connell appealed for power and a show of Irish strength in 1843 they marched 20,000 strong to a central point, at Clontarf. But having brought them there O'Connell did not know what to do with them. And so he uttered a few platitudes and bade them go home.

Five years later the Famine burst on Ireland and Black Valley and the starving peasants found themselves without leaders, without hope.

• • • •

WHEN ENGLAND finally satisfied itself, after thousands had died, that the Black Valley famine was not a local matter but a national catastrophe it set up a vast, cumbersome relief system. A works program more fantastic than any WPA project was instituted. Then suddenly the program was abandoned at the height of the cholera epidemic.

Few of the Black Valley folk could afford the luxury of emigration. And there was only one other alternative for them—slow death. Within a short time the valley was empty . . .

"Hoar frost had fallen in the night . . . It lay in a whitish crust upon the sagging thatch of the empty houses and on the blighted fields that were already falling back into the wilderness. The stone walls, the granite boulders, and the gorse bushes were white with it. It had formed a thin crust of ice on the surface of the Black Lake. The river was the only thing that moved beneath the gray sky."

Thus "Famine" ends—a chronicle of suffering in an Irish twilight, a scathing exposure of man's inhumanity to man.

"Famine," by Liam O'Flaherty (Random House, $2.50).

Book Ends

IT'S ALWAYS interesting to know where authors get the inspiration for their books . . . Zelda Stewart Charters, whom everyone here in Washington knows, hit upon the idea for her new book, "Barbary Brew," in a most novel way . . . Bored and idle on a rainy Sunday, she was attracted to a flamboyant Sunday magazine supplement, showing the firing of the Philadelphia by Stephen Decatur . . . She was doubly interested because she was brought up in a town in Illinois named for him . . . After reading the story through, with its romantic account of the extraordinary exploits of the Yankees captured by Tripoli pirates, she decided to write a novel about it . . . The Library of Congress yielded a diary written in 1789 by Cathcart, who stayed 11 years as a captive in Algiers, and a little book written by the sister of the British consul in Tripoli, which volubly relates the gossip of her ten years' day-by-day association with the women of the Bashaw's harem . . . Zelda's father was Ethelbert Stewart, who spent more than 45 years in the United States Department of Labor . . .

• • • •

ANOTHER "LOST" NOVEL which is forthcoming as a facsimile reprint is Henry Adams' "Esther," published under the psuedonynm of "Frances Snow Compton" . . . It deals with an imaginative treatment of a personal crisis in Mr. Adams' own life and suggests some of the sources of the symbolism which he later developed in "The Education of Henry Adams" and "Mont Saint Michel" . . . In a letter to John Hay on August 23, 1886, Mr. Adams confessed that the book was so precious to him that "to admit the public to it would be almost unendurable" . . .

BETT HOOPER.

Tom McCarthy

All Is Not Play At D. C. Seats of Learning.

IT ISN'T all play for the freshmen at the District universities, even if those at American U. do spend their noon hours pushing peanuts across the graveled walks with their noses, and those at Georgetown spend their evenings ridiculously rowing imaginary boats across the "quad."

TOM McCARTHY.

Some place, and in some mysterious manner, they seem to find time to attend classes and even to study. What is still more amazing is that some of them find time to cram in a little outside work, to help along with their expenses.

While about 15 per cent of the Georgetown Freshman class . . . and about 30 per cent of the first-year students at American . . . are engaged in some sort of part-time work, George Washington, for which no figures are available, walks off with the prize for the strangest part-time job, held by a freshman.

Frank Krogman, who attended McKinley High, has a wide, friendly smile and an ambition to become a naval aviator. Intending to major in math and physics during his stay at G. W., he looks forward to the day when he'll be qualified for entering aviation.

In the meantime, to help pay for his education, he's working as an undertaker's assistant.

• • • •

"I DON'T KNOW that I particularly like the work," Frank said, "and it takes a little time to get used to it, but it fits in pretty well with my school work."

I couldn't quite figure that out, but Frank assured me that undertaking, of all things, just fits into the school schedule.

"You see," he said, "I'm able to get in a good many of hours of work over the week-end, because in the undertaking business that's the busy time."

Arnold Fine speeds off the campus at American U. to take his post at a barbecue stand as curb waiter. Inside the stand a classmate, Wes Sarles, sees to it that no customer drifts by the cashier's desk without paying his check.

Harry Amtower, another American University freshman, has a sideline which makes definite demands on skill. He teaches a group of boys, from 7 to 12 years of age, the intricacies of wood carving.

• • • •

WHILE SOME are busied with outside jobs, others are undergoing the siege known as being rushed for a fraternity. And all are bothered by the simple persecution of the various sophomore vigilance committees. Nevertheless, Mr. and Miss Freshman still find time to go to class.

A couple of days around the campii of the various universities in the District, and I was beginning to wonder if they ever actually went to class. However, I'm now fully satisfied on this point. I can testify that they do, because I went to class with them.

It was sort of a grand feeling to lounge back in a classroom chair and, once again, feel that schoolroom drowsiness creeping in. I don't know what there is about a classroom that gets me like that, but it's a feeling of comfort scarcely equaled anywhere.

You just sit there, watching the sunlight puddle the floor, and listen vaguely to the drowsy hum of voices. Outside of the dimly-seen gestures of the professor, there isn't much life to distract you, if you decide that a "snooze" is in order.

However, I didn't take even a "cat nap," because that class in public speaking at American U. was a pretty good show. I'm not sure that all the boys and girls in room 206 were exactly at their best that morning, because, after all, it's pretty hard to be at your best in any public speaking class.

All the students had to make a two or three minute speech, and some of them showed considerable talent. They had been assigned a list of topics upon which they could speak and one Mr. Stone, of the first-year class, acquitted himself with a technique worthy of a master politician.

"Might makes right," said Mr. Stone, "and sometimes it doesn't."

Then he went on to draw examples from the international scene which proved that "might sometimes makes right—and sometimes it doesn't."

Everyone seemed quite satisfied and Mr. Stone sat down, having proved that he could not only make a speech, but also maintain the fine balance demanded by the "yes" . . . and then again . . . "no" school of oratory.

• • • •

THE STUDENTS were being judged solely on their speaking form, so they weren't particularly worried about the text of their efforts. In fact, I suspect that one young lady waited until the last minute to decide which way she was going to hold in her speech.

She concluded with this vigorous statement: "The strongest side always wins . . . sometimes."

However, it was Donald Davido who stole the show. He made a stirring oration explaining the ill-wisdom of putting off until tomorrow what you can do today.

"I knew of this assignment to prepare a speech," he said, "I was told last Monday that I would be expected to make a speech. Did I follow out the old proverb, 'Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today'?

"I did not follow that old proverb," said Donald, with a fine frankness. "Monday passed—no speech. Tuesday—and still no speech. Wednesday—came and almost went."

By this time the class was hanging on Donald's words with a breathless expectancy. I think that even the professor was beginning to worry, lest Donald blurt out the fateful truth that he had no prepared speech.

"Wednesday came—and Wednesday almost went," Donald repeated with the dramatic sense of the born orator, "and I still had no speech.

"However," he said, as the room relaxed again with an audible sigh, "it was merely a close call, because I sat up late last night—and prepared this," and with that he sat down.

800% Budget Boost Held Necessary to Set Up More Va. Clinics.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—The State health department intends to spend more than eight times the amount expended formerly for veneral disease control in Virginia if the budget commission approves the requested allotments for the next biennium, Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said today.

Last year the health department spent approximately $8,000 in setting up clinics and providing drugs for the treatment of syphilis, but the new budget request calls for $66,530 to be spent for this purpose during each year of the next biennium. Of this amount, however, Dr. Riggin said, the Federal Government is expected to provide approximately half.

Estimating that there are 180,000 syphilitics in Virginia, many of whom are going without treatment, Dr. Riggin said the health department if furnished with the requested funds would stress clinical work and treatment in an effort to curb the disease rather than to indulge in an "advertising campaign."

In the six-month period from December to last June the State health department established ten new clinics for the treatment of syphilis, he disclosed. Their value, he said, was demonstrated by the fact that nearly 1,000 new cases were discovered during the first month of operation.

Ship's Engineer Dies Trying to Save Aide

Philadelphia, Sept. 30 (U.P.).—A Baltimore marine engineer gave his life today in an attempt to rescue an assistant from a gas-filled tank in the hold of the tanker Frances E. Powell, anchored in the Schuylkill River.

First Assistant Engineer Hansen Jensen, of Baltimore, was pronounced dead of asphyxiation at a hospital. Richard W. Gassdorf, second assistant engineer to whose aid Jensen went, and two seamen who also were overcome by the fumes, were expected to recover.

Marvin Miller, 17-year-old Oklahoma City youth, gets a tearful welcome as he returns to his mother, Mrs. M. C. Miller. Two men kidnaped Miller and Billy Stark, 16, stole their car and then bound them in a lonely spot overnight with ropes held by Mrs. Miller, who is wiping her son's eyes.

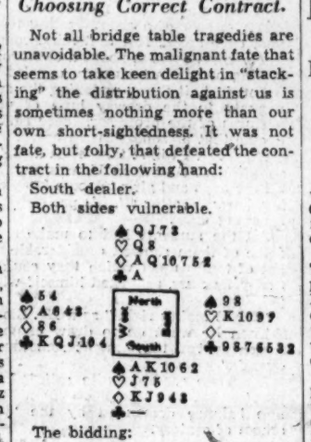
Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Choosing Correct Contract.

Not all bridge table tragedies are unavoidable. The malignant fate that seems to take keen delight in "stacking" the distribution against us is sometimes nothing more than our own short-sightedness. It was not fate, but folly, that defeated the contract in the following hand:

South dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	5 ♣
Pass	Pass	5 ♠	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

West realized that his partner would not have doubled the five spade bid except to convey a very special message. East had given a very belated jump club raise, thereby indicating that he had preferred to wait until the opponents had reached game which, in turn, meant that the five club bid was a sacrifice attempt. Obviously, then, East must have a great many clubs and could not expect to take club tricks against the opponents' contract. East must be calling for some opening lead other than a club and this, of course, narrowed West's choice down to hearts and diamonds. The fact that North had bid, shown a probable holding of at least five diamonds by his first response, plus the implication of great length in South's jump diamond raise, made West decide in favor of a diamond lead. Naturally, since he himself held only two he could not be sure that East was void, but there was a distinct chance of that, augmented, as I have said, by the special meaning of East's double.

West, therefore, opened a diamond. East duly ruffed and returned a heart. A second diamond ruff was followed by the cashing of the heart King, for a 500 point penalty.

North could thank himself for this outcome—he had bid the hand badly throughout. Over West's two club bid North should have jumped in spades, to set the trump suit and pave the way toward asking bids. But the two diamond bid, imperfect as it was, would not have been fatal if North had made the proper inferences from South's jump raise.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North Dealer.

2,500 Enrolled In Four Days of Red Cross Drive

Nine Companies Report 100 Per Cent Enlistment of Employes.

Led by the Government groups, various units in the Red Cross Roll Call organization last night had registered 2,500 memberships in the drive which began Monday.

The financial group, headed by Thomas J. Groom, has secured 100 per cent enrollment from nine firms, Edgar Morris, chairman of the general business group, said last night that his workers were reporting widespread enrollment in all parts of the city.

Meanwhile, Rall Call officials completed plans for tonight's pageant to be presented on the stage of the Capitol Theater at 9 o'clock. Following a special Red Cross overture played by the Capitol Theater Orchestra, past service and present activity of the Red Cross will be dramatized in a series of tableaux.

Among the guests at tonight's pageant will be Admiral Cary T. Grayson, national chairman of the Red Cross; Gen. F. R. Keefer, District chairman, and Marcy L. Sperry, chairman of the Roll Call.

Supreme Court Asked To Study Balm Suit Ban

Lawrence Hanfgarn, of Long Island, asked the Supreme Court yesterday to pass on the constitutionality of the New York State law of 1935 outlawing civil actions for alienation of affections, seduction and breach of promise.

New BlueRoom Opens Tonight At Shoreham

Premiere to Feature Revue and Tunes Written by Miss Hackett.

By Chanticleer

The Shoreham's new Blue Room will be presented in premiere to Washington tonight. L. Gardner Moore, the Shoreham's manager, advises that "there is no finer room in the United States." And that would seem to indicate that Mr. Moore has done a little research before committing himself to such a wide-sweeping statement.

The Blue Room is said to be a masterpiece of designing, with three ringsides so that every seat is a perfect one for observing the orchestra and floor show. For the premiere, Janette Hackett brings her revue to Washington—with a background of girls known as the Eight DeLovelies. Miss Hackett, who is a modest person really, says she has "the prettiest collection of girls in any floor show."

It will be Barnee's eighth season as maestro at the Shoreham. High spot of the premiere musically will be tunes written, with lyrics, by Miss Hackett herself.

Just one week from tonight the "champagne and orchids" opening of the Mayflower lounge takes place. Brass hats and bigwigs who frequent the lounge in the long winter evenings particularly are sure to be on hand for this gala occasion. Manager R. L. Pollio has released nothing officially but spies report that he will launch a new entertainment policy for this season. Better call District 3000 and make your reservation early with Teddy.

Yevo and Daro are headliners at the Lotus this week in modern tango, Continental rhumba and Arabian romance numbers. "Satch and Satchel" are on hand, too, in "Maniacs of Song and Dance." Joey Dean contributes intricate dance routines and Marion Dawn and Buddy Shaner represent the home forces vocalizing with Bill Strickland and his orchestra. Al Norton is the master of ceremonies. Three shows daily.

Little things of interest are taking place at the Wardman Park's Metronome Room. The other night Bob Crosby was out—howled at the didoes of Sammy Ferro, drummer with Paul Kain's Orchestra. Then Ina Ray Hutton dropped in, too, a night or so ago. Xavier Cugat, coming to the Earle, will make the Wardman his headquarters at least one evening. All of these band leaders know Paul, you see.

• • • •

Peter Borras, your host at the Madrillon, stood back the other evening and surveyed the band stand on which Johnnie Shaw and his ork are perched for some of the town's better dance music nightly, and decided the stand needed some alterations. So, Peter being the sort of fellow he is, there will be some elaborating done in that quarter soon.

Someone is coming soon to the Mayfair but Boss Byrd won't say who it is. A surprise feature, as it were. Another surprise is coming to the Mayfair, too, with a big contest to determine what lovely maiden is to become the "Mayfair Girl."

It's a "Swing Time Revue" at the new Bamboo Gardens this week. Following the premiere opening earlier in the week only the best can be forecast for Russ Cullen and his new orchestra and the new entrants into the after-dark field here. The revue presents Helen and Tommy Nip, dance team; Patsy Shaw, songstress; Peter Wells, Fay Fisher, Marie Beheler and Mary Martin. A fast and swell looking hour of entertainment. Floor shows three times daily.

Following last night's premiere, things are in full swing at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room, with Sonny Kendis and his orchestra featured nightly in the kind of music that set patrons of New York's smart Stork Club to dancing action. Treasury Gets Plea to Repeal Levy on Gains

Undersecretary Cordially Receives Suggestion for Tax Revision.

Two callers on Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury, yesterday said they obtained sympathetic hearings of their pleas for repeal of the capital gains and undistributed profits taxes, and one of them, Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, said Magill mentioned possibility of hiking income taxes on middle-bracket incomes.

Celler called at the Treasury with Morris S. Tremaine, New York State comptroller.

Tremaine expressed the opinion that repeal of the capital gains impost would act as a powerful business stimulant, probably yielding the Treasury an additional $250,000,000 in collections from other taxes.

The capital gains tax provides for taxing gains on sale of assets at regular income tax rates. On assets held less than one year, 100 per cent of any gains must be included in income for purposes of taxation. This percentage gradually scales down the longer the assets are held, to a minimum of 30 per cent after a minimum of ten years or more.

Earlier in the day Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had said that this was not the time for him to talk about taxation or budget matters for the 1939 fiscal year.

He pointed out that his last formal statement on taxation dealt with the lack of need for new taxes at the last session of Congress and added that "this leaves my hands untied on the next session."

He declined, at his press conference, to estimate how much might be saved in the economies now being studied, or whether the budget could be balanced in this fiscal year.

His answer was "definitely no" to a question whether he would conduct a major financing operation before the regular quarterly borrowing date December 15, and he announced $50,000,000 in discount bills will be sold as usual Monday, pending completion of the study on whether to shift from the nine-month bills to some other security in the Treasury's regular borrowing.

As Congregation Bade Farewell to Pastor

Rev. Freeley Rohrer Retires; Presbyterian Cleric 43 Years

Metropolitan Congregation Shower Gifts on Pastor Who Served D. C. Church 20 Years; Portrait Is Unveiled.

Five hundred members of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church said farewell last night to the pastor who has led their parish for the last 20 years. At a reception in his honor in the church at Fourth and B streets southeast, Dr. Freeley Rohrer received their good wishes and retired from the ministry which he entered nearly a half century ago.

The recipient of many gifts, Dr. Rohrer was most pleased by the unveiling of his portrait that will hang in the church.

Dr. Robert H. Alcorn, a church elder, presented the gifts, and J. Bruce Handy, another church leader, unveiled the picture. Earl C. King was master of ceremonies, which included music in addition to speeches.

Dr. Rohrer told his congregation that while he will not assume another pastorate, he will continue his ministerial service in a general way. He is 68. Several years ago, he said, it became his ambition to remain in the Metropolitan Presbyterian pastorate until he had served the parish 20 years.

Dr. Rohrer was born August 13, 1869, in Montgomery County, Ohio. He became an ordained minister in that State in 1894, preaching his first sermon in his home church in Dayton.

Last night he recalled that since coming to Metropolitan Church he had received 1,076 persons into the membership. During that time his congregation contributed more than $370,000 to local church and other projects. Marking his pastorate, also, was a remodeling of the church at a cost of $50,000.

The retiring minister will reside at 1121 East Capitol street. He plans to assist churches needing the help he can give them, and will continue to serve the Washington Presbytery as stated clerk.

Bishop Freeman Silent On Elevation Proposal

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Epescopal Bishop of Washington, yesterday declined to comment on the suggestion that he should be elected presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

This proposal was set forth by the Right Rev. George Craig Stewart, Bishop of Chicago, in a statement issued Wednesday.

Rally Set Today At Barney House

Rally Day will be held for 300 school children of Southwest Washington at Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest, this afternoon at 3:30.

The youngsters will hear about the new fall activities of the settlement and be urged to join its clubs and classes.

Numerous improvements have been made. An old stable has been converted into a temporary gymnasium to accommodate the increasing number of children. New physical director is Herman Riley, formerly of the District playground staff. Classes in carpentry, metal work, weaving, sewing, cooking, art and music will be organized at the rally today.

Sweet Potato Buying In Md. Started by U. S.

The Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation began yesterday a program of purchasing sweet potatoes in the Eastern Shore of Maryland to relieve distressed marketing conditions.

The corporation at the same time announced a quota of 130,000 bushels to be purchased on the Eastern Shore of Virginia under the program begun Monday. The Maryland Eastern Shore quota was set at 32,500 bushels.

G.W.U. Centers NominateSpeer For Presidency

James Speer 2d, sophomore in the junior college of George Washington University, was nominated at a convention of the Center Party in Corcoran Hall last night for the presidency of the Student Union. The election will be held October 7 and 8.

Layton MacNichol, junior in the School of Government, was chosen Center Party chairman.

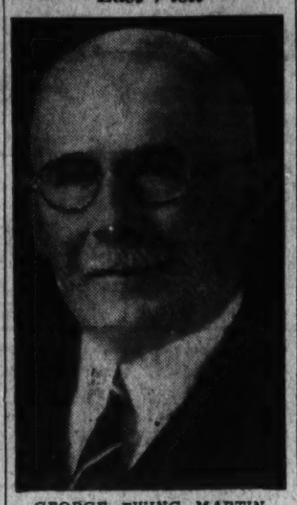
A controversy stirred in discussion of the party platform when a plank was introduced advocating a constitutional amendment permitting Congress, by a two-thirds vote, to override decisions of the Supreme Court declaring legislation unconstitutional, provided an election had intervened.

Despite opposition of Speer, the plank was approved.

Other planks favor the Wagner act, national minimum wage legislation, abolition of child labor, income and inheritance taxes, and local and State relief for unemployment. Abolition of veterans' preference as a determining factor in public employment was approved.

The platform advocated complete readjustment of the Versailles Treaty, American participation in economic boycott against aggressor nations and American participation in a world economic conference.

Last Visit



GEORGE EWING MAFTIN.

Gorge Ewing Martin, Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District, paid a last visit to his office yesterday and then, after bidding farewell to the men with whom he has worked so long, resumed the life of an ordinary citizen.

Justice Martin, nearly 80, said he plans to "take it easy for a while." His resignation from the appellate court bench became effective at the close of the official day yesterday He retires at full pay.

He was appointed to the bench of the United States Court of Customs Appeals here in 1923.

Arlington Officials Stage Bout When 'Lie' Is Passed in Cafe

A political session in a Clarendon cafe yesterday resulted in one citizen being removed to the Georgetown Hospital and the other having his "feelings hurt."

Robert W. Gaines, an Arlington County real estate man, was treated for lacerations of the scalp, effected by a metal napkin holder, which Gaines charged was wielded by George Yeatman, former chairman and now member of the Arlington County Board. Gaines was later released from the hospital.

"I appeared at the board meeting on Wednesday," Gaines said, "and asked that work on the Fairfax Drive be approved. Yeatman, prior to the meeting had promised that he would aid in passing the resolution. But he did not."

"I walked into the restaurant," he continued, "the next day and met him. I inquired about his reasons for the apparent double-cross. He called me a liar and I struck him in the face. Then he 'bopped' me with the napkin holder."

According to Yeatman:

"I was eating lunch in the restaurant, when Gaines walked in, and pointing his finger at me said 'you were at another member of the board's house until 2 a. m. prior to the meeting and tried to persuade him against development of Fairfax Drive'."

At this point Yeatman is said to have called Gaines "a liar."

"Then," Yeatman stated, "he struck me in the face, and I picked up the napkin holder and hit him over the head."

But a happy ending came late last night when the two men met in the same cafe. Their differences apparently forgotten, they shook hands and sat down together to drink coffee and eat ice cream.

U. S. Power Head Rebukes Attorney

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch of the Federal Power Commission rebuked a New York utilities lawyer at a public hearing yesterday after the latter had apologized for criticizing the commission.

McNinch told C. Edward Paxson, counsel for subsidiaries of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., he had "erred and erred gravely" in stating to the press several days ago that clients of his had withdrawn from a power commission proceeding "when there was reason to believe that the decision of the commission would be adverse, regardless of the merits of the matter."

San Francisco, Sept. 30 (AP).—Warden James A. Johnston, wounded last week when attacked by a convict at Alcatraz Federal Prison, returned to his duties today.

He reported the "strike" of 100 men, which apparently precipitated the attack, was "crumbling rapidly" and that the rebellious convicts were returning to their jobs.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

COPYRIGHT 1937, for The Washington Post

Of course, they might name that new dragon at the Zoo—the one which just came across the ocean—Justice Hugo. . . .

* * *

That stalwart Puritan, the Hon. Ed Kenney, of New Jersey, notifies me that he will push his bill for a national lottery at the next session of Congress. Why give a billion a year to urriners for their lotteries, or waste it shooting craps, he demands.

* * *

The only objection I can think of is that too many patriots would try to subtract their lottery tickets from their income tax returns . . .

* * *

Unless the master-minds install a traffic light at the Pierce Mill and the entrance to the Zoo Park in Rock Creek, some bemused tourist will be knocked clear into the lions' cage one of these days.

"—government clerks wasn't drive?"

I applaud Representative Palmisano's plan to discourage Government clerks from parking their cars downtown all day . . . But how? . . . Maybe they should be told to bicycle to work, and ordered to wear their pants clips all day, to prove they didn't drive, but pedaled.

* * *

Feminine workers could be forced to wear bloomers instead of pants clips, to prove they had left their Fiats at home and cycled to work; and any girl caught in a Rolls Royce in bloomers could be docked three days sick leave.

* * *

* * *

Some of the young bureau chiefs who won fame back home as women haters suddenly find themselves masters o' a harem in Washington, willy-nilly and begin to change neckties in the middle of the day . . . Four or five good wise cracks about the New Deal darn near assure a man's social success in the circles of the star-spangled opposition.

* * *

If a man changes jobs in the middle of the year, after the Government has collected all his Social Security payments for that year, apparently he has to pay the maximum sum all over again, out of his wages on the new job!

"—a tourist to the lions."

A patriot who was informed last June by his old boss that the 1937 deductions from his 1937 salary were complete now finds that 1937 deductions begin all over again on his new job . . . So he pays double . . . Sounds like an incredible racket, but apparently the law is written that way.

* * *

Who get's the G. O. P. deficit, if there's a third party coalition next year? The press agent at the Shoreham claims that it's unconstitiutional for a man in Washington to wear white summer clothes after the Shoreham's night club moves indoors . . . The lobster newburg is more than passable at Pierre's, but the waitresses remind me of the girls who serve the church suppers at the Iowa State fair.

* * *

After I've attended a few more Treasury press conferences I think I'll hire out to Wall Street as a financial expert—my lore will be Mr. Morgenthau's cryptic answers to the reporters . . . Or by concentrating on the gags the reporters toss at the Secretary I might as easily become a Hollywood gag-man . . . It's worth a trip to the Pan-American Union to see that banana blossom in its gaudy purple blooming—but I have a sneaking suspicion that it isn't real, but a sly creation by Director Leo S. Rowe, the artificer.

Redmen, Banker, Heads New Dry Ice Firm Here

Samuel C. Redman, Washington banker and businessman, has been appointed vice president and general manager of the Consumers Carbonic Corporation a newly formed organization which will manufacture dry ice here.

Redman, a native of Washington, is a former president of the Takoma Park Bank and director of the Lincoln Park Bank. He is now president of the Manganese Consolidated Corporation, of Strasburg, Va.

3 'First Families' Move Into Greenbelt as Carting Van Shortage Prevents Tugwell Village From Becoming Thriving City at Once

Now they're happy in their little Utopia of Greenbelt! Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stevens, among the "first settlers," are busy in their modern kitchen. Stevens' Utopian ideas extend to drying the dishes.

Doors open wide, to be forever ajar, for Mr. and Mrs. Roy Braden, as they start moving in. Braden cheerfully lugs a chair.

The postoffice opens, and it is, of course, at the moment, the newest postoffice in the United States. George W. Bryant, Greenbelt's first postmaster, receives mail from K. M. Farley, a resident engineer.

Post Staff Photos.

The three "first families" of Greenbelt moved into the $14,000,000 experimental town yesterday afternoon.

As the families of Roy S. Braden, city manager; George Bryant, postmaster, and Lewis Stevens prepared to spend the night in their new brick an cinder-lock homes, what for many months had been a planner's dream at last became a living community.

Married a year, Mrs. Stevens, who will be Braden's secretary, excitedly expressed her pleasure that the moving men had told her she had "done a good job."

Braden, the first executive of Greenbelt, has been a city manager for 12 years, and from 1932 to 1936 he was manager of Arlington County.

Of the 25 families already selected by the Farm Security Administration as Greenbelt pioneers, several were in the process of moving in yesterday, and probably will spend tonight in their new quarters. A shortage of trucks and vans was the chief reason why Greenbelt's population is not already larger.

The only official recognition of Greenbelt's beginning will be the opening of the postoffice. The first letter to be postmarked Greenbelt was mailed to President Roosevelt by Postmaster Bryant.

Although the FSA would not reveal the names of families selected to live in the $18 to $41 a month units, it was learned that among them will be Sergt. and Mrs. J. M. Ashley, of the Marine Corps; Mr. and Mrs. Allen D. Morrison and three children, 223 Eighteenth street northeast; Mr. and Mrs. John P. Graham and two children, 1104 Queens street northeast, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burk and three children, 1353 Massachusetts avenue southeast. Approximately half of the families thus far are Government employes.

Originally planned by Rexford Guy Tugwell, the community is expected to accommodate 885 families by putting "homes and land and people together in such a way that the props under our economic and social structure will be permanently strengthened." One hundred and twenty-two of the units are ready for occupancy.

Three Deaths Investigated At Hyattsville

Poppenberg Wounds Called 'Self-Inflicted' But Not Suicide.

Three recent sudden deaths in Prince Georges County were studied at the inquisition held in Hyattsville last night.

August Poppenberg, 31-year-old Washington man found dead September 2 in a stolen Army engineer's truck parked near Berwyn, Md., died of "self-inflicted" wounds, Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips ruled.

Judge Phillips said that evidence showed conclusively that the bullet from which the man died was shot by his own hand. He refused to return a suicide verdict, however.

Testimony heard in the case of Charles Lee Miller, Washington cab driver whose skeleton was found near Greenbelt, Md., last July after he had been missing for about a year, failed to reveal any cause of death.

The skeleton was identified as Miller's through testimony furnished by Dr. William Lewis, Washington dentist.

The justice ruled that Edward Merson, Prince Georges County policeman, killed a month ago in an auto crash, met death accidentally. The policeman died when his car hurtled into a tree near Muirkirk as he was answering a call.

Department Store Aide Married Here

Edward Frank Bahn, manager of the summer furniture department of the Hecht Co., was married last night to Maxine Bowers Coffman, of 118 Fifth street southeast.

The ceremony was performed at the Metropolitan Baptist Church by the Rev. John Compton Ball, the pastor.

Mrs. Bahn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Coffman, of Edinburg, Va. She has lived in Washington for the past two years. The couple will make their home at 200 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

School Food, Community Fund Called Independent Necessities

Head of Free Lunch Campaign Denies Any Overlapping; University Professor Sees Harrowing Sight on Visits.

Sharply distinguishing between the aims of the $100,000 free-lunch fund and the Community Chest, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the citizens' emergency committee for the feeding of hungry school children, said last night that the two campaigns, far from overlapping, were mutually supplementary.

"Underprivileged families constitute the other side of the picture," Mrs. Boyle declared, "and their needs must and will be met by the Community Chest appeal."

Referring to the inability of the Community Chest to provide an initial grant to the free-lunch committee, Mrs. Boyd said that "this is only further indication that the citizens of Washington ought to participate in Community Chest activities."

Stressing the emergency nature of the project, Mrs. Boyle pointed out that with the opening of schools many pupils are expecting the free meals which have been given them for several years past. The children of 3,000 workers who have been dropped from WPA rolls will in many cases require assistance from private charity also, she said.

After intensive personal investigation, in which he visited a number of schools, Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, of Columbus University, observed last night that "I am convinced the need does exist and is widespread." Dr. Fitzpatrick, a member of the citizens' committee, had previously found "incredible" the possibility in Washington of such extensive undernourishment.

Dr. Fitzpatrick quoted Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, as saying that an investigation by elementary school principals throughout the city indicates that from 1,600 to 1,700 white pupils will require aid this year, compared with 2,500 last year.

A. Kiger Savoy, assistant superintendent in charge of colored elementary schools, gave 2,900 as the number of colored children who will be in need of free lunches during 1937-38, Dr. Fitzpatrick said.

"I saw a 12-year-old girl in the third grade whose arrested mental development was directly traceable to her emaciated physical condition, which was caused by mineral starvation," Dr. Fitzpatrick asserted.

"An investigator informed me that one family, consisting of a father, mother and three minor children, were discovered eating one head of raw cabbage as their entire supper. Their housing conditions were indescribable."

To benefit the free-lunch campaign, the "Flying Angels," a troop of stunt fliers, will present an air show at College Park tomorrow and Sunday afternoons at 3. A large proportion of the receipts will be handed over to the fund. Among the stunt pilots who will perform are V. W. Burnett, Lieut. C. R. Douglass, George Scheder, and William McGalliard. George de Grange will make a delayed parachute jump, and Gus Wiltshire is scheduled to drive an auto through flames.

Miss Ruth Madden, of Stoneleigh Court, was appointed general chairman of the charity ball committee yesterday. Other officials for the affair will be selected next week.

The Central, Northeast, and Brooklyn-Woodridge Businessmen's Associations all announced their support of the free-lunch campaign in resolutions adopted yesterday, Arthur Clarendon Smith, chairman of the businessmen's unit, stated last night.

Citizens Oppose Non-Residents' Use of Schools

Repeal of the law permitting use of District schools by children from neighboring States will be requested in a petition to Congress next term, according to a resolution passed last night at a meeting of the Conduit Road Citizens Association.

Following study during the summer by a committee investigating the tax problem, the association voted to indorse the committee's recommendations for a single property tax and an income tax.

The free-lunch campaign for hungry school children was approved.

2 D.C. Residents Badly Hurt by Hit-Run Autos

Silver Spring Woman, 70, Treated for Shock and Bruises After Crash.

Several persons were seriously hurt in traffic here yesterday, two of them by hit-and-run drivers.

David Moore, 64, of 301 Second street northwest, suffered a fractured right arm, a fractured skull and cuts and bruises when he was struck by a hit-skip driver in a large black sedan as he tried to cross the street in the 700 block Third street northwest.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where physicians said his condition was serious. Police sought the driver of the car.

The victim, Mrs. S. M. Nichols, 70, of Silver Spring, was treated at Sibley Hospital for shock and bruises when the car in which she was riding with Sallie Cook collided with a car driven by Dixon at Michigan avenue and Harewood road northeast.

Henrietta Giorosa, 63, of 3814 Alton place northwest, suffered a possible fracture of her spine and left shoulder late yesterday when she was struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Raleigh Harmon, jr., of the 3400 block R street northwest. The accident occurred on Tenley Circle.

Mrs. Giorosa was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where physicians said her condition was serious.

Opera Tickets Offered As Prizes for Essays

Prizes of complimentary tickets for the performance of "Rigoletto," to be held in Constitution Hall by the Washington Popular Opera Association October 12, will be awarded for the best compositions on "Why Washington Needs a Grand Opera."

Don't Forget That Keepers Blushed When 'Joseph Laid 20 Eggs.

Torrance might not be such a bad name for the male giraffe coming to the Zoo after Uncle Sam takes two weeks to make sure he doesn't have hoof and mouth disease.

But that's only a teaser because you, the public, are supposed to christen not only the giraffe and his mate but also the Chinese alligator, Komodo dragon, shoebill storks, black leopards, tree-climbing kangaroos and all the other new specimens which so far answer only to the dinner bell.

There are four giraffes, but two already have come to be known as Nicky and Spring Song. The male orangutan couldn't be called anything but The Wrestler, because of his predilection for hugging, and the baby Sumatran tiger was named Hari before Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, placed him on shipboard.

With those exceptions, every one of the more than 1,000 mammals, birds and reptiles just arrived from the Orient can use a name tag. If you are curious to know just what kind of names zoo animals receive, step up and meet:

Josef, the Zoo's No. 1 lion.

Susie, the widowed orangutan, who is to be mated with The Wrestler, if she'll accept him and vice versa.

Maybe it would be wise to visit the Zoo before making your nominations, because the animals' physical structure and personal habits will give valuable inspiration in most cases.

The tapirs, golden cats, leopards, tigers, tree kangaroos, Himalayan bears, all birds, Komodo dragon, giant Chinese salamander, sail-tailed lizards, binturongs, gibbons, orangutans, civets and many others already are on exhibition. You'll have to wait a few days to see the pythons, cobras and other snakes and about 10 days for the giraffes, bluenose sheep, African buffalo and the others which are in quarantine.

THOSE GIRAFFES

Four nice giraffes are coming to Washington Zoo after they've complied with Uncle Sam's 15-day quarantine regulation. Two already are known as Nicky and Spring Song, but the other pair is still unnamed.

How do you think they should be known? Certainly it won't do to call them Giraffa camelopardalis I and Giraffa camelopardalis II.

Just remember that one is a lady giraffe, the other a gentleman. Also that neither ever makes a sound, even if he (or she) has a toothache; that the necks are very, very long; that the animal doesn't bite but packs a mean hoof kick, and that it is keen of sight and hearing.

Wage Parley Split on Sum Clerks Need

Controversy over the cost of living in Washington continued last night in the fourth session of the District minimum-wage conference now attempting to fix a scale for retail clerks.

Testimony introduced by W. H. Press on behalf of the industrial interests committee of the Washington Board of Trade and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association drew cross-questioning by conference representatives of employes and the public.

John J. Esch, chairman of the conference, suggested the Press survey of room and board prices should be extended to include houses in Southeast and Southwest Washington. Press also was question as to his assumption that late September and early October represent the maximum figures in room rentals. Another suggestion for widening the scope of his report was that investigators give more attention to condition of beds in the houses inspected.

Press had reported on the basis of a sample survey that a minimum of 1,000 rooms are available in Washington at $3 a week for room or $8 for room and board.

Dr. Faith M. Williams, chief of the cost-of-living division of the Labor Department, presented figures showing a 12.8 per cent decrease in the cost of living for families of four from April, 1919, to June, 1937. Dr. Williams also cited increased consumption of milk, fruit and fresh vegetables as evidence of an increase in the standard of living over the same period.

John H. Hanna, employers' representative on the board, stated the improved standard of living did not represent an increase in living cost and hence an argument for higher wages, but should be considered as evidence low-salaried employes are now able to buy more for their money.

Dr. Williams added a WPA survey taken in 1935 revealed Washington living costs as the highest of 59 cities investigated.

Board spokesmen for employes presented a report in support of their claim for $1 a day as food allowance for clerks eating in restaurants and cafeterias. Hanna questioned the 55-cent allowance for dinners and expressed the belief of employers that 90 cents a day was sufficient for three meals.

Row With Taxi Driver Costs Man Fine of $5

Because he too forcibly remonstrated with a taxi-driver who said he could not supply a nickel change, Hoyt Arnold, colored, 142 Pierce street northwest, was fined $5 yesterday before Police Judge Hobart Newman.

Arnold said he was merely insisting upon receiving a nickel change, which the driver, Earl Everett, colored, 756 Morton street northwest, said he did not have.

A New Outlet Is Presented Collegiate Playwrights In Second Competition of the Bureau of New Plays

TODAY marks the official opening of the Second Play Competition of the Bureau of New Plays, 1270 Sixth avenue, New York City, for awards, fellowships and scholarships. Manuscripts are now being accepted.

The Bureau of New Plays, headed by Theresa Helburn, one of the founders and managing directors of the Theater Guild, is sponsored by seven major motion picture producing companies, aided by the co-operation of an advisory council composed of Walter Prichard Eaton, of Yale; Frederick H. Koch, of the University of North Carolina, and Kenneth Rowe, of the University of Michigan.

BELL.

The seven sponsoring companies and their representatives in the Bureau of New Plays are Marion Avery, Columbia Pictures Corporation; J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Russell Holman, Paramount Pictures; Leda Bauer, RKO-Radio Pictures; Edwin P. Kilroe, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; Charles Beahan, Universal Pictures Co., and Jacob Wilk, Warner Brothers-First National.

Anyone who has attended college as graduate or undergraduate student since September 1, 1931, as well as those now enrolled as graduate or undergraduate students, is eligible to compete this year.

Awards of $500 again will be made to the others of the six best plays submitted in the competition. At the discretion of the bureau, and on the basis of future promise and financial need, these awards may be increased to scholarships valued at $1,250 or to fellowship awards of from $1,500 to $2,500. More awards may be granted if the material submitted justifies it, or if, in the opinion of the judges, the material submitted does not justify the full quota of awards, the Bureau of New Plays reserves the right to grant only as many as the judges recommend.

Certain new phases in the work of the bureau and steps for the future are announced in addition to the terms and requirements of the Second Play Competition. Close continued co-operation with the playwriting faculties at colleges has led Miss Helburn and the board of directors to see that an additional step in bridging the chasm between the academic and the professional theater would be of great valaue to students in playwriting.

Therefore, in addition to the awards, the directors will make every effort to see that winners of awards and honorable mention will have practical contact with production in the theater. The intention is to secure the opportunity for these promising students to attend rehearsals of professional productions and to study professional production problems and their solution. An experiment was made in that direction during the spring and summer, when a few of the bureau's award winners were employed as stage managers or extras.

This year, the recipients of scholarship or fellowship awards will be expected to submit at least two plays within the year's tenure of the scholarships or fellowships, or within six months thereafter, and in case of production of one or both of such plays, part of the scholarship or fellowship awards shall be considered as advance royalties to be returned to the bureau for the maintenance of awards.

The Bureau of New Plays was founded May 4, 1936. Manuscripts submitted in its second play competition will be accepted from October 1 to December 15. The awards will be announced not later than March 15, 1938. Plays must be original, unpublished and unproduced by any professional theater and must be of full length.

This announcement from Ruth Benedict for the Bureau of New Plays should serve as a concrete reply to the many who have petitioned this desk for advice as to what to do with the works reposing in the bottoms of their favorite trunks.

Those tried and true votaries of the traditional theater who attended the National Theater yesterday morning at 11 to hear Elmer Kenyon speak informally on "The Season of 1937-38 in General and 'Madame Bovary' in Particular," were edified by a scholarly and instructive talk. Mr. Kenyon traced the growth of the subscription plan of play presentation, citing the Theater Guild as an outstanding example of the efficacy of this device which has been employed successfully in the theater for many years. He also sketched an illuminating background of Flaubert's career as a realist who resented and effectually combated the saccharine sentimentality of the theater in France in his day. Thus "Madame Bovary," the Guild production to be given its American premiere in the National Theater on Monday night, becomes less the study of a single woman, a character from real life though she was, than a close analysis of any woman living in her environment in her time. It is in this role that Constance Cummings will be seen in Washington for the first time in a major dramatic character.

Mr. Kenyon's talk, incidentally, was only the first of a series of similar "extracurricular" activities to be fostered by the American Theater Society of Washington this season. Subsequent events of this character probably will be celebrated at 5 o'clock in the afternoon when a greater number of theater enthusiasts will find it convenient to attend.

As a feature of the regular Red Cross Roll Call in Washington, the overture at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, beginning with today's first performance, will be an atmospheric tribute to the work of this splendid organization.

Arrangements have been made for representatives of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps and a special group of Red Cross nurses to participate in a stage tableau that will reflect the far-reaching service in which the Red Cross is engaged. Tonight at the 9 o'clock performance, officials of the Red Cross and the United States service branches will occupy the stage boxes to view the brief pageant. Among those invited are Admiral Cary T. Grayson, national chairman of the American Red Cross; Miss Mabel T. Boardman, and Roll Call officials of the current District drive.

Additional color will be lent this unit of the Capitol's program by scores of Red Cross staff assistants in full uniform, who will act as ushers in the official section.

* * * *

Late word has been received from New York that Carmen Castillo, vocalist with the orchestra, will not be able to appear with Xavier Cugat on the stage of the Earle Theater this week. A singer of fine voice and charming personality, Miss Castillo will be missed. In private life, Miss Castillo is Mrs. Xavier Cugat, whose tango and rumba orchestra stands at the top of organizations of its kind.

* * * *

The spectacular rise of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who has become No. 3 man on the U. S. political scene through three years of ruling New York's 7,000,000, is made one of the important subjects in the next issue of "The March of Time." Mayor LaGuardia himself, in accordance with precedent, enacts his own role in the film, which features the dynamic personality of the wartime Army major who, in three short years, rid New York of more than three-score acketeers, overcame a deficit of $41,000,000 annually, to balance a budget of more than $700,000,000, and drove machine politicians to cover. LaGuardia already has been mentioned as a Presidential possibility in 1940 by more than one of the country's foremost political observers and writers.

Owing to the length of "Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938," this release of "March of Time" cannot be included on the current bill at RKO-Keith's Theater. It will, however, come along in due course.

In the meantime, it is worth remembering that "Vogues," starring Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett, is unanimously declared by all who have seen it to be the finest all-Technicolor picture ever made. We shall see what we shall see.

Three Gelatin Jacks and a Queen

If life really begins in college, the pictorial evidence herewith is to the effect that it begins with a song. Reproduced above are the slightly bewildered likenesses of the three Ritz Brothers and Gloria Stuart, as they appear in "Life Begins in College," the lunatic football comedy opening on the screen today at Loew's Capitol Theater.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 30.—I enjoy my movies just as much as anyone, but there are times when they give me a profund inferiority complex. Last night, for instance. I saw a picture that sent me home with the depressing conviction that I will never amount to shucks. Along about the third reel, the hero went to bed. I saw him climb into bed in a pair of freshly-ironed pajamas, toss and tumble restlessly—and then get up the next morning without a single wrinkle in his pajama pants. And not one hair on his handsome head was mussed, either. Then, in the last reel, what did he do but slip out of his office chair, take the sock (just one, mind you) at the villain's chin and knock that big bruiser colder than a healthy hound's nose.

Freddie Bartholomew.

I would give almost anything to be like that. When I get up in the morning, my hair looks like a heap of shredded wheat and my pajamas, back from the laundry the day before, resemble a relief map of the Rockies. And the last time I took a sock at a man's chin (a little man, he was, too) he forgot to fall down. I was quite embarrassed—but I suppose he had never seen a movie and didn't know that one punch should knock him out.

People tell me that I should be inspired by the immaculate heroism of every picture's hero. Usually I am. But there are times when I feel crushed and inferior. Maybe I send my pajamas to the wrong laundry.

On any movie set where a dumb animal is working, you invariably find a man who, though obviously not employed by the studio, watches each scene with an eagle eye. He is a representative of the S. P. C. A.—the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals—there to do his duty as a "preventer." And his presence is not only tolerated, but actually demanded, by the producers. In the old days almost every picture featuring an animal was the signal for a tirade and an investigation by the S. P. C. A. The studios, in desperation, finally implored the society to place an investigater on every set. There have been in all motion history not more than two or three authenticated instances in which animals were abused. Movie trained dogs, cats and horses are too valuable to be ruined by cruelty.

Everywhere people are discussing the personality of the hour, Robert Taylor, so it seems fitting for me to contribute my character clue. There is a room in Bob's house that fairly bulges with its store of Western boots, wide-brimmed Stetsons and leather chaps. Whenever he has the chance, Bob dresses like an "Old Cowhand." He is gun-crazy, spur-crazy, horse-crazy. Maybe he has always had a cowboy complex; maybe it is a recent development—but there it is, ready to be fitted into a character analysis of the screen's No. 1 lover.

And the sight of the idol of the American school girl, swaggering around in high-heeled boots and a 10-gallon sombrero never fails to tickle my sense of humor.

Cantor States Case as Honor Week Impends

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 30.—Eddie Cantor reported today that he appreciated the forthcoming testimonial dinner being tendered him, but he couldn't help wishing somebody had given him a meal 25 years ago—when he really was hungry.

"As Will Rogers once said," he added, "They always give you dinners after you're able to buy your own."

The round-eyed comedian, of course, couldn't help but be touched by the ambitious plans of old friends to honor his 25 years in the amusement field with a silver anniversary dinner here one month from last night.

The idea was that of Joseph M. Schenck, who appointed an executive committee consisting of James A. Farley, the Postmaster General; Will H. Hays, the movie chieftain; Louis B. Mayer, head of M.-G.-M; Paul Muni, the actor, and Gov. Frank F. Merriam, of California.

They have set up headquarters here at the Ambassador Hotel, declared the week of October 24-30 "Eddie Cantor Anniversary Week," and have received acceptances on the "honorary committee" from scores of big-wigs.

Wife Didn't Believe It.

Interviewed in his bungalow on the Twentieth Century Fox Lot, where he completed "Ali Baba Goes to Town," a couple of days ago, Cantor reminisced on his quarter of a century in the show business, explained his ideas of fun for pay, and related what he considered the funniest gag of his career. No theater-goers ever heard it.

"It was back in 1926," he said, "and I was playing on the stage in New York. The then Prince of Wales was staying at Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island, and I was invited to go up to entertain him.

"I never had seen a prince before and I was a little excited, I forgot to phone my wife where I was going.

"I didn't get back home until 10 minutes to 6 the next morning. My wife had waited up all night for me. She asked me where I'd been.

"I said: 'I've been with the Prince of Wales.'"

"'Go to bed, you tramp,' she told me, 'and tomorrow night I guess you'll be telling me you were out with President Coolidge!'"

As he looked back over the years, Cantor said he'd decided that being funny is no fun.

Fun A Serious Business.

"Being funny is really very serious," he said. "You've got to learn first off, what not to do. By that I mean its too easy to get a laugh at somebody else's expense.

"You can't make fun of people's misfortunes. You can't joke about their stuttering, for instance. Then you've got to keep your jokes clean. People may laugh at dirty stories, but they don't appreciate them.

"Then, as time goes along, you've got to develop your funny vein. You can do it, too, just as you would develop your voice, by constant practice and experimentation.

"Finally, the audience has got to know that you're human.

"Anybody can put on a woman's hat, and get a laugh in the parlor, but that's not real comedy. You have got to make people remember, to strike some responsive chord.

"People laugh not alone at me, but at friends of whom I remind them.

"If I've got to ridicule somebody to get a laugh, then I always ridicule myself. But even then I can't go too far.

Cantor seems to be the busiest man in Hollywood. He's using his Spanish-type studio bungalow, with a cactus garden in the front yard, as headquarters for his multiple activities.

A constant stream of visitors on urgent business, including radio moguls, advertising agents, script writers, gag men, musicians, lawyers and what not, wend their way to his front door.

With the help of a competent secretary and concentration enough to make him frown like Boris Karloff, Cantor manages to take care of them all. It isn't any fun.

"Its work," he said, "and by work, I mean work."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, September 30.

UNITY: Some months ago the Hilton sisters, Siamese twins, were the subject of newspaper editorials—because one of them had been refused a marriage license. . . The twins are now touring with the Cole Brothers Circus and recently became members of the American Federation of Actors. As such, they were called upon to pay the annual dues in that organization. The twins sent a check, to cover dues for one—explaining that, as their bodies were joined, they actually were one person. . . . The A. F. A. council convened and has agreed thereto.

* * * *

AWARD: When the New York Drama Critics Circle awarded its prize to Maxwell Anderson, George Jean Nathan read the speech—written by Eugene O'Neill . . . When O'Neill was awarded the Nobel Prize—the first American playwright to win it—he received congratulatory messages from almost every American playwright—except Maxwell Anderson.

* * * *

DEFEAT: Bill Murray, head of the radio department at the William Morris office, recently offered a radio program to an advertising agency handling the sponsor's account. The agency decided to take a poll, called in all its stenographers and asked them to select their choice of entertainers from (1) Jack Benny, (2) Burns and Allen, or (3) Murray's client . . . They finished in that order . . . "Now I've got another poll for them," Murray returned. "Have them take their radio choice from (1) Abraham Lincoln, (2) George Washington, (3) Franklin D. Roosevelt." . . . "I don't see the connection," the agency officials replied. "You can't get Washington or Lincoln." . . . "And that's just it," Murray explained. "You can't get Benny or Burns and Allen!"

* * * *

HONOR: Archie Mayo, now working for Sam Goldwyn, was brought into the producer's office and was regaled with descriptives of the harmony in which all Goldwyn employes work . . . "My business is an open book," Sam told him. "And we all have no secrets from each other." . . . The phone rang just then. Goldwyn hesitated before lifting the receiver, turned to Mayo and said, "Would you mind waiting outside until I'm through speaking?"

* * * *

FAME: Friday evening Ted Husing arrived in Columbus, Ohio, to broadcast the Ohio State-Texas Christian game. Husing had broadcast nine Ohio State games—all of them lost by that team, and so the populace felt that Ted was a jinx. . . . He sat in Mills Restaurant there, supping with a 6-foot New York sports writer and a soused native berated them. Husing punched him, and the native was tossed outside. . . . When the New Yorkers were about to leave, they noticed a muttering crowd outside, waiting to wreak vengeance. Ted placed his arm around the sports writer and said, loudly enough for the mob to hear: "Now, Montague, please be careful. After all, Montague, you still have to stand trial, so don't fight." . . . The mob dispersed.

* * * *

TRIUMPH: Douglas Leigh, the youngster who has monopolized the Broadway electric-sign trade, erected the sign which faces Bryant Park. The sign is located atop a three-story house. One of the tenants for 13 years has hung her wash to dry in that spot and, undaunted, continued to hang it there, directly in front of the sign . . . A settlement was affected last week. The tenant henceforth may hang her wash behind the sign, on Monday's only, and for three hours.

* * * *

ENTERPRISE: Now it can be told: The Vermont float in the American Legion parade extolled the virtues of the skiing facilities in that State. The float was decorated with young pretty ladies, attired in skiing togs . . . None of these girls ever has seen Vermont. They all were hired after responding to an ad.

* * * *

CHATTER: Ned Alvord, America's most famous advance-man, is quitting Billy Rose to work for the Shuberts . . . Luther Adler, who will be the prize fighter in Clifford Odets' new play, is taking it seriously—with build-up exercises at Luxor gym . . . The Gay Nineties Cafe revue will be broadcast by a sponsor and the money will be divided among the actors. This is the first Radio Co-operative . . . Stuart Allen is on three programs—two Hit Parades and the Unseen Friend—but gets no billing . . . Arthur Brown, husband of the social Marion Steffanides, is returning to the night club fold. He opens at El Morocco next week . . . Leslie Banks, of "To Quito and Back," is in the hospital—and so Ben Hecht has rewritten the second act.

* * * *

SWANK: After the Sands Point debut of Gloria (Mimi) Baker, world's richest deb, the local police chief phoned Mimi's mother, Mrs. Margaret Emerson, and informed: "Madam, we got a guy down here from your party. He bit a cop, so what'll we do with him?" . . . "Sir," was Mrs. Emerson's haughty reply, "Have the cop bite him back!"

That Profile Takes a Beating!

Although John Barrymore has assumed heavy disguises in other film plays—in "General Crack," for instance—seldom has he so completely obscured his classic profile as in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," the screen mystery drama opening at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater today. He is pictured above in this grotesque makeup.

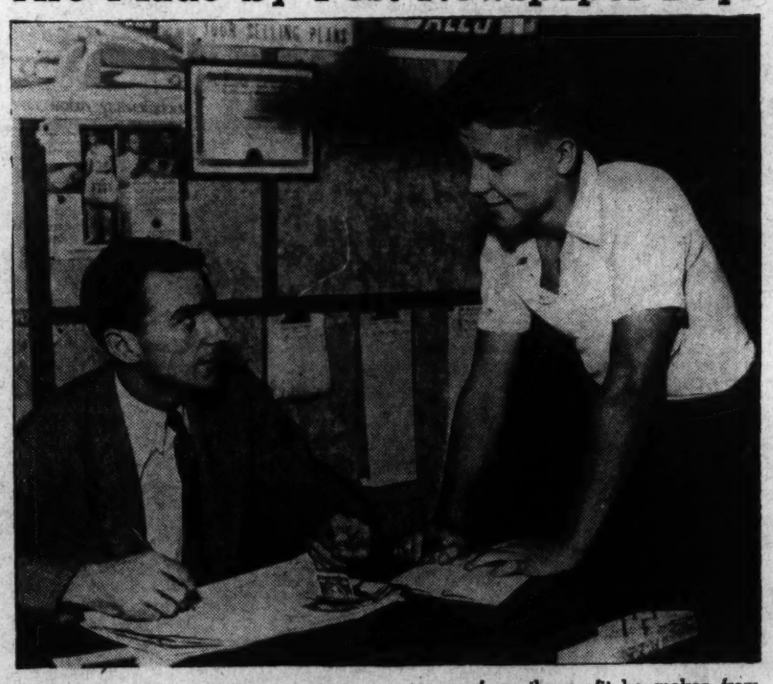
Regular, Convenient Collections Are Made by Post Newspaper Boys



Regular, convenient weekly collections are an important part of The Washington Post Newspaper Boy's service to his customers. His weekly collections are made at the end of the week at a time of day most convenient for the largest number of his subscribers. The Post carriers are careful to collect regularly for the convenience of everyone on their routes.

Collections are particularly important to Post Newspaper Boys because each boy operates his route as his own business enterprise. His income from the route he serves comes from the profit he makes from the purchase price to the delivery price he collects. When he fails to make his regular collections, his profits are less. The above photograph shows a Post Newspaper Boy making his weekly settlement with the District Manager. This scene is enacted weekly by the approximately 1,000 boys who operate their Post newspaper routes in and near Washington.

You can assist The Post Newspaper Boy on your route to be a more successful young businessman by paying him when he makes his first collection call each week.

Hoover Warns Identification Experts to Shy From 'Uncooked' Crime Theories

Police Survey By Brookings Indirectly Hit

Law Enforcement Academicians Attacked as 'Medicine Men.'

Launching a sharply worded attack on critics of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, J. Edgar Hoover, without mentioning names, yesterday warned delegates of the International Association for Identification to beware of "self-made magicians who run about the country teaching half-baked theories, expounding mucilaginous and uncooked ideas about what to do with the criminal and how to prevent crime."

There was no doubt in the minds of delegates that Hoover's assertions were directed at the Brookings Institution's report on crime control, made public Wednesday.

In the report, which is the result of a study prepared by Dr. Arthur C. Millspaugh, the Federal agencies of crime control are criticized for "self-advertising outbursts" and "show-off" tendencies.

"Medicine Man" Enforcement.

"Perhaps we always shall suffer from the inroads of the 'medicine man' in law enforcement," Hoover said. "Perhaps the charlatan always shall be with us, the faker, designedly or otherwise; the fellow who believes he has some patent nostrum which can end criminality overnight."

Neither Attorney General Cummings, who also addressed the convention, nor Hoover referred directly to the report, which also charged Federal law agencies with failing to co-operate. But Cummings drew smiles and applause when he asserted that Hoover and he "at least, have had 100 per cent co-operation."

Charging that the average law-enforcement officer was "sickened with the interference" by the "half-baked" theorists, Hoover stated "it is only natural that a general classification of idiocy should be placed upon the average run of such weird ideas."

Hoover refused, however, after the speech, to comment pointedly on the Brookings report. He was quoted as having stated "draw your own conclusions" about his address.

Hoover criticized the State parole system, stating that "moo cow sentimentalists" were obstructing the administration of justice by committing "tremendous outrages in the name of parole."

In this single instance the head G-Man coincided with the Brookings report, which, in referring to parole systems said:

"Pardons and paroles are, in too many cases, merely acts of executive caprice, or worse."

Continuing on the topic of parole systems, Hoover said:

"There must be some reason that the parole boards of backward States do not profit by the lesson of the Federal parole system which has proved conclusively that it is possible to make a success of parole."

Cummings Charges Laxity.

Charging this country with being "woefully lax" in establishing standards for crime performance, Cummings said it was "significant that in most States any person, regardless of his intelligence quotient or his training, can become a justice of the peace, a coroner, a prison guard, a parole officer or a sheriff."

"Any study of characteristic failures in law enforcement," he said, "reveals that in a large percentage of instances they are the result of faulty, unskilled administration of the law rather than a weakness in the law itself."

Cummings praised the I. A. I., expressing the hope that "all groups dealing with crime control were equally as expert" as the members comprising the association.

A major reason for frequent breakdowns in the administration of criminal justice was the delay "between conviction in the trial court and the decision by the appellate court," he said.

The I. A. I. delegates were taken on a tour of the F. B. I. quarters and later visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

This morning Edward P. Mulrooney, commissioner, department of correction of New York, will speak on "Law Enforcement Problems."

They are:

Fraulince H. Smith, Lucy Beatrice Remsburg, Joseph Banks, Johnny Brooks, Leroy D. Washington, Charles Mayes, Edward H. Bundy, Gilbert G. Brown, Sidney Kaplan, Charles W. Bryan, William R. Columbia to Start Television Soon

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Tentative plans for a non-commercial program of television broadcasts to begin in "the near future" were announced today by William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Returning to the United States on the French liner Normandie, Paley said the broadcasts would be transmitted from the top of the Chrysler building and, according to present plans, the first broadcasts would be of important news and sports events, relayed from the scene.

Bullitt in U. S. to Put Daughter in Va. School

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, arrived today on the French liner Normandie with his 13-year-old daughter, Anne. Bullitt said the sole purpose of his trip was to place his daughter in school in Virginia, and he planned to return to France October 15.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Maybe So, Maybe Not.

Picketing or not picketing, that was the question. It arose in this way: A department chief thumbed a handbill which had been distributed among workers in his building. The handbill carried the alleged facts of a personal dissension within the department, called for a correction of the situation. The official wondered if this be picketing in the broad sense of picketing or just a case of harassment for the department. You can have a guess; your interpretation of picketing is just as good as anyone else's.

Parachuting.

Your Government is a first-rate parachute designer. Seriously, no backhand compliments intended. Emergency parachutes have been made from pieces of burlap 6 feet square to drop food and other supplies into the lines—sometimes cut-off lines—of forest fire fighters. There have been experiments with the following convincing results: In one instance, nine dozen eggs were dropped 500 feet and only two eggs broke. Food in glass jars and milk in glass bottles reached the ground intact.

LaGuardia Forever!

A non-partisan, independent organization of New Yorkers known as the Fusioneers has come here to do or die for LaGuardia. They have appealed to New Yorkers working for Uncle Sam here to "cast their ballot for the maintaining of good government in the Empire City." Also, it is announced, a registration train will leave Washington at 1:20 p. m. Saturday, October 9. This will leave sufficient time for registration as the polls are open until 10:30 p. m. The Fusioneers' headquarters are at 1406 G street northwest, room 305.

May Be a Thinker.

A gentleman—his voice excited enough—called from the Agriculture South Building to ask us the identity and aims of the man who has taken a chair in a South Building corridor with a seeming intention of counting those who pass by. A lot of spade work by us failed to locate the individual, much less to learn of his enterprise. "Maybe they're tightening down; are checking up on us," said our informant. But Agriculture isn't one of those snooping places. We suspect it was just one of the Government's master minds, camping out of his office temporarily for a little high-powered thinking.

An Ancient Pastime.

The Agriculture Exchange reports that "at the sixth meeting of the activities council, it was moved and adopted that the purchase of a grand piano be approved in principle." And how many families of moderate means have done just that. But it seems the council will get the piano.

Alumni of the Northampton Commercial College, Northampton, Mass., will meet tomorrow evening at 6:30 o'clock in the Gingham Club to effect an alumni organization. The college is largely represented in the Government field here and 100 or more alumni—who are now Uncle Sam's employes—are expected at the organization meeting.

Heading the committee is Linus F. G. Goyette, of F. C. A. Assisting him are Lucille E. Fine, R. R. B.; Mrs. Marion E. Libby, G. A. O.; Mildred C. Streeter, and Ramona L. Vincent, Interior; John C. Pickett, principal of the college, will attend the organization meeting, along with three members of the faculty, Mrs. Catherine Rogers, Mrs. Arline J. Royce, and Henry Trow. Any NCC graduate or former students is invited.

Small Craft Warned Of Storm on Atlantic

Miami, Fla., Sept. 20 (U.P.).—Small craft, from St. Augustina, Fla., to the Virginia Capes, were cautioned to remain in port today, as the Federal hurricane warning system reported northeast winds lashing the South Atlantic Coast.

One of Trio Held In Cafe Robbery Admits His Guilt

Less than 24 hours after the grand jury indicted Alfred H. Bauer, 22-year-old George Washington University student; Harry G. Smith, 39, alleged "trigger man," and William P. Allen for the holdup of the S. & W. Cafeteria, Allen pleaded guilty in District Court.

Brauer and Smith denied their guilt and indicated that, for the present at least, they were prepared to fight the charge. All three were remanded to the District Jail.

James Dyson, 17, and Conrad P. Carter, 26, both colored, pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking into the home of James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt, early last month, and taking several articles of jewelry.

Janitors Go On Strike, Picket Washington U.

St. Louis, Sept. 30 (AP).—Washington University was picketed today by its janitors and other building service employes, who went on strike for higher wages and shorter hours.

Hull Will Return Canadian Visits Late in October

By the Associated Press

Secretary Hull announced yesterday he shortly will return the visits made to Washington this year by Canada's governor general, Lord Tweedsmuir, and Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Emphasizing he plans only a "courtesy" visit, Hull said he does not intend to take up any official questions on the three-day trip to Ottawa and Toronto. He will speak October 22 at the University of Toronto.

The Secretary said he and Mrs. Hull accepted an invitation from Gov. Gen. and Lady Tweedsmuir to visit them at Ottawa October 20-21.

D.C. Businessmen Keep Wires Hot to Miss Tax Penalty

Hundreds of confused Washington taxpayers yesterday either went to the District Building or called officials by telephone to get under a tax deadline that was no longer operative.

Despite the fact the Commissioners had extended the time for receiving business privilege tax returns from October 1 to October 16, many business and professional men thought yesterday was the last day they could escape a 10 per cent penalty.

About 4,000 returns have been filed this week, as compared with 2,000 during the preceding weeks.

WE'VE GOT IT! SWIFT'S Branded VEAL

Saniseal-Wrapt it's fresher, finer-flavored

A REVOLUTIONARY DEVELOPMENT ... this thing Swift is doing with veal. Better for us dealers and for you, our customers.

Up to now, veal has commonly been shipped with the hide on to help retain its freshness. When shipped with the hide off, the meat has been practically unprotected. Now Swift has devised a truly sanitary method that effectively protects the veal—the new Saniseal wrapping illustrated below. See how it keeps the veal really fresh, seals in the delicious flavor. And see how the meat is branded—Swift's Premium or Swift's Select or Swift's—so you can easily identify it.

Come in and let us show you the new packaging, the new branding. Once tried, you'll always want Saniseal-Wrapt veal!

THIS SANISEAL-WRAPT METHOD IS EXCLUSIVE WITH SWIFT; PATENTED U. S. 2,076,053

● FRESH AND DAINTY, Swift's Branded Veal is shipped to us in bags of a special type paper. A truly revolutionary development, when you consider that up to now veal has commonly been shipped with the hide on; with the hide off, the meat has been practically unprotected. Only Swift & Company's Veal is Saniseal-Wrapt.

● AND UNDER THE PAPER, a second special wrapping! This one is of tight-fitting, snowy muslin. This double wrapping, exclusive with Swift & Company's Veal, gives marvelous protection for freshness and flavor. You don't know how good veal can be till you taste this new veal of Swift's, the kind that is Saniseal-Wrapt.

● CLEARLY IDENTIFIED. Saniseal-Wrapt veal is plainly marked, both on the whole piece and on single cuts. Strips of cellulose down the side identify it by brand name—Swift's Premium or Swift's Select or Swift's. All Swift's Branded Veal is Saniseal-Wrapt ... reaches you fresh and appetizing and fine-flavored.

● LOOK FOR THIS BRAND! This marking on the piece distinguishes veal that has been selected by experts at America's Meat Headquarters; then double-wrapped Swift's new, patented Saniseal way so that it reaches you in prime condition. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

When Unannounced Engagement Exists, Rumors Float and Friends Question, Who Speaks First?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please advise two worried girls. My chum and I are engaged to two of the most precious boys in the world but there has been no public announcement. The four of us double-date together about once a week. Both boys have a habit of waiting on us to take the initiative in everything. For instance, when our friends ask us if it is true that we are engaged, our fiances wait for us to speak first before they will admit it. In such a case, who should speak out first—the boy or the girl? It really is an embarrassing situation.

* * * *

Here is another question: Being engaged, naturally we don't accept invitations from other boys, so when there is some place we wish to go that our fiances don't know about or haven't suggested, is it proper for us to ask them? We have done so occasionally, but some of our girl friends (even those who know we are engaged) seem to think we are making advances when we telephone them or ask them to go somewhere. What is your opinion? JEAN AND JANE.

* * * *

DEAR J. AND J.: When no public announcement of an engagement is made, either through newspapers or at a party given by the young lady or her parents, it is considered good form for the young lady to impart the secret verbally to close friends if she so desires. It is eminently correct for the young man to wait upon the girl's admission of the fact before seconding her statement. Therefore, your embarrassment is without foundation in this respect.

* * * *

Once a boy and girl become engaged, there should be no thought in anyone's mind of the girl's pursuing the man if she chooses to telephone him occasionally or to suggest places to go, persons to see or things to do. She should be careful, however, not to place too heavy a drain upon his purse; nor to embarrass him before his business associates by calling his place of business incessantly. Also, she should be fairly certain that he is planning to see her on a given evening before she suggests a choice of diversions. Then she may say, "Unless you have planned something else, why don't we do thus and so? The Blanks have asked us for bridge," or "Bill and Sue want us to drive over to Annapolis with them," or "I have tickets for the new show," or whatever she has in mind. M. H.

Meaningless Gallantry.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Let me into this argument about domesticity vs. courtliness in husbands. Of course, there is no question that the hapyp medium is preferable, but of the two extremes I would vote for the towel-hanger-upper any day.

* * * *

When your husband gallantly helps you out of a car, or notices every new dress and hair-do, it is all very thrilling and romantic, I admit. But it must be borne in mind that it is not your own charms which inspire these attentions so much as habit. When you hear him pay the same compliments to Mrs. Brown, as he will, without fail, some of the glamour seems to fade away. You realize then that it is a grace your husband has acquired through practice and not a special reaction reserved for the woman he loves. So what do you have in your husband's gallantry but a rather nice habit?

* * * *

Another angle to the discussion is this: Doesn't a sweet word from someone who seldom voices pretty sayings mean infinitely more than a compliment from someone whose lips are always spouting flowery phrases? There is something essentially insincere about a man who is continually bowing, scraping and paying lavish compliments. But when a man who has to be prompted into giving a compliment hands out one gratis, you know he means it! Compliments don't come easily to the earnestly thoughtful type of men. They are too busy working to prove their affections; and the smoothies would rather resort to words! Give me the towel-hanger-uppers and let those who want them take the smoothies. They're welcome to them. MISS PRACTICAL.

Yankee Gentlleman!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This controversy about which is the more admirable quality in a husband, domestic helpfulness or drawing-room manners, has gotten under my skin. It so happens that I ame the very fortunate possesor of a husband who has both attributes. From the day I met him 24 years ago (we have been married 22 years) he has always shown me that sweet, charming thoughtfulness so dear to the heart of woman. Also he is as neat as a pin in his personal habits. But what I am getting at is this—he doesn't come from below the Mason-Dixon line; and I infer from the comments of some of your correspondents that such thorough-going courtesy is supposed to emanate from and flourish only in the South.

Sincerely yours, HAPPY WIFE.

The 'Floradora' Coiffure for Day and Evening

CURLS on your forehead, on top of your head, or low on your neck, plus a peaches and cream complexion and chiseled features, are the glamour accents to complement the romantic 1900 influence in clothes. The daytime coiffure below, created to cope with towering turbans, off-the-face brims, and profile hats, has soft curled bangs and sleek, down-sweeping lines, falling into soft curls on the neck. For evening (right), sculptured lines are accented by curls at the brown of the head and insouciantly over the forehead. Both coiffures are adaptations of the new "Florodora" hair styling.

Your Coiffure and Complexion Must Harmonize in Gay 90s Garb

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOU ARE going in for the 1937-38 sophisticated version of the Belle of the Gay Nineties in your fall and winter wardrobe, your coiffeur and complexion must harmonize, or the effect will be incongruous. Delicately chiselled features and a peaches and cream complexion are having a definite revival to complement the clothes reminiscent of Lilly Langtry, the Floradora Sextet, Lillian Russell and Boldini. To accent the new "platinum" skin tones, the Floradora coiffure, as sponsored by an internationally known hair stylist and cosmetician, is the final word in femininity and elegance. In this styling the hair is gathered up at the forehead as if to form an 1890 pompadour, but instead, let fall suddenly into sophisticated modern ringlets. An old influence, but as modern as tomorrow in its unexpected effect and chic appearance.

Illusion Necessary.

All the artistry and illusion of modern makeup are now called into service to produce the mood of charm, allure and glamour that is the keynote to the current fashions. The new faces of this season will be fair as to complexion tone, velvety smooth as to skin texture and rich in hue, as to cosmetic coloring. Face powders are lighter in color, lipsticks and rouges are on the red-blue side, with such shades as red velvet, raspberry and red coral predominating. The use of powder foundations is advised by authorities, to impart smoothness and transparency. Luminous eyelids are the scintillating finishing touches to this glamour trend. They are dramatized by irridescent eyeshadow, topped with a bit of herbal eye tissue oil. Mascara should be blue if the eyes are blue and blue-green for brown eyes, instead of the conventional black or brown.

Vary Your Colors.

Instead of just one color range in your makeup, color should be varied to harmonize with the costumes; just as accessories must complement certain frocks and suits. When the hat dips precariously on one side of the face, almost concealing one eye, careful attention should be given to the makeup of the lips. If the hat soars skyward, then it is the eyes that are emphasized and dramatized. The texture of the skin is of utmost importance this year, because of the face and forehead-revealing hats, in all of their styles and vagaries. Makeup for evening must be brilliant to cope with the gleaming fabrics, such as sequins, velvets, satins, lames and the like. To promote harmony throughout the entire makeup, fingernail polish matches the lips in color tone. As a final touch to all this glamour, glitter, femininity and opulence, as modernized from the 1900 influence, brillantine and perfume are added to the quaintly modern coiffure.

Striped Scarves.

Paris (U.P.)—Striped satin ribbon scarves looped ascot style and fastened with unusual pins at the neckline are shown in smart shop windows for wear with plain colored dresses. The scarves pick up the tone of the dress and show it in wide stripes of varying shades or may accent a contrasting hue. Soft woolen ascots are displayed in pastel shades and traditional silks are embroidered with a variety of designs.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Children's Teeth Care.

The critical age for tooth health is 6 years. Then parents should begin actively supervising their children's dental hygiene, and see that regular visits to the dentist are begun. The important teeth at this age are the ones just coming in—the last ones in the arch—the back ones.

The sixth year molars. Their great importance is due to the fact that they are the first permanent teeth. Parents are likely to get into their heads that the two front teeth are the first permanent ones. This belief is held partly because they are the first temporary teeth to come in, and partly because the parents remember their own permanent teeth in process of eruption.

But the front teeth are not the first permanent ones. Those front teeth come in at about the seventh or eighth years—(sometimes the sixth). The first molars are counted in the adult as the first permanent teeth.

Another reason why these are such important structures is that the first molars are liable to decay perhaps more than any other tooth. The parents may think this is decay in a temporary tooth and pay no attention to it.

Tragedy follows this ignorance and indifference, for if they are first molars, or any one of them is lost, the whole integrity of the dental arch is impaired. Many mouths have been ruined and early loss of all teeth caused by failure to take care of the teeth which come in at the fifth or sixth year.

There are stories that a third set of teeth come in sometimes in elderly people. It seems to be well authenticated. The subjects of this phenomenon are between 63 and 81, as the usual thing.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 30.

AND SO BEGINS what is undoubtedly the loveliest month of the year in these screaming parts. Faces have not yet hardened into the grim lines of a New York winter, which have been known to send visiting children screaming to their mammas. Even the streets, bathed in the cool, clear sunlight of fall, look cleaner and more inviting.

ALICE HUGHES.

"The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year," were not written about Manhattan Island in the fall. That poem was dashed off by a bard who sat and stared broodingly at dyong foliage until he burst into tears and verse. We Gothamites are safe from this unless we sit on a Central Park bench and gaze moodily at the defunct leaves fluttering to earth. If we keep on the move, alive with the dawn of the town's peppy season, we are never melancholy in autumn, but are filled with ginger, and with delight at the prospect of the exciting months to come, cold and slushy though they may be!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Beatrice Kaufman, smart and handsome wife of George S., the hit-playwright, is again a free woman—I mean professionally. She has given up her job as Eastern story editor for movie-magnate Sam Goldwyn (nee Goldfish). Bea, as you know, is one of ou leading milliners' hates, as she swings through the midtown streets with her mass of handsome greying hair utterly innocent of hat!

If we have nothing else here, we have plenty of Service, with an extra big ess. Name your service—we have it, and we have many you'd never dream of after welsh rabbit. The latest to meet my eye is The Termite Control Service, an organization to stamp out those minute critters that eat away at your house until it falls down on your heads at dinner. The men of this service scientifically eradicate the tiny varmints from woodwork, so just give them a buzz as needed!

Kathleen Cory, a book buyer of here, feared she had gone loopy as she arrived at her Charleton street home the other morning very early. Snow covered the stoop of the house next door, lighted candles were in the windows, and so was holly! In September! She was about to give herself up when a man approached and said not to worry, that moviemen were making a scene to boost the sales of '37 Christmas seals! Aren't the films wonderful?

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHATEVER became of the business girl who bristled with efficiency in the office and out? The smart woman in business today is an enigma, as efficient as an adding machine during office hours and as feminine as any socialite after 5 o'clock.

There is no stamp to mark today's career girl. She makes it her business to look her best at all times. How does she do it? She has a system which builds beauty and resistance to fatigue.

Well aware of the effect of office routine on the best of figures, she goes to a gym twice a week for exercises that will counteract any tendency to desk-chair spread or stooping shoulders. Strangely enough, this activity affords a much-needed rest from the inactivity of the most trying day at the office.

Toward the end of the week, the smart young miss on a limited budget goes for a swim, washes her unruly locks under the shower, dashes upstairs to the beauty shop and has her hair set for 50 cents. She emerges from all this fresh as a daisy—ready for an evening's fun and the next day's work, too.

In case you haven't one, here is a pick-yourself-up program for the end of a busy day and the beginning of a busy evening:

Every business girl should salvage one hour out of the day for beauty's sake. When you have been with people all day, you need this one hour alone for a let-down.

First cleanse and cream your face, leaving a thin film on while you pop into the tub. Your bath should rest and relax you while removing the grime. A tepid bath is soothing to jumpy nerves, a warmer bath is mildly stimulating; avoid a very hot bath, which is enervating.

Now for a few exercises: Until you have tried them you have no idea what ten to fifteen minutes of brisk exercise can do for your spirits and your body. Begin slowly with stretching exercises to relieve muscular tension and take the kinks out of your backbone. Then follow with corrective exercise for any threatening bulge.

After this workout, lie down on a thick blanket on the floor completely relaxed, with arms on the floor overhead. Stay there for 15 to 30 minutes. Have the windows open and a warm blanket over you. It is a good plan to have a large pillow under your shoulders, not under your head. This arches the back, which is just what you need after a day of bending forward. You still have the cream on your face, of course, and you might also place witch hazel compresses on your eyes.

Do as you like about taking your bath before or after exercise, but a warm bath before exercise and a quick, cool shower after exercise, then a rubdown with a rough towel, leaves you in a pleasant glow.

Fifteen minutes for your bath, 15 for exercise and 30 for complete relaxation, makes a beauty formula that is perfect for the tired business girl.

Two Important Debuts Set for Thanksgiving

Miss Marian Kirk Comes Out in Afternoon and Miss Marie Tudor McCook Will Be Presented at Dinner Party.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

With two top-rank debutantes coming out in the Capital on the same date this year—Thanksgiving—and each being on hand to help the other make her bow to society, December buds had better look to their laurels.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Miss Marian Kirk, attractive blonde daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Alan Kirk, will be presented by her grandmother, Mrs. Frederick L. Chapin at a tea on the afternoon of November 25. That evening Miss Marie Tudor McCook, who has already blossomed into New York society and is soon to make her debut in Boston, will be presented by her grandmother, Mrs. Anson G. McCook, and her aunt, Mrs. McCook Knox, at a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club. Following the dinner guests will remain for the club's regular Thursday evening dance.

While plans are being completed for her debut party, Miss Kirk is at Bryn Mawr, working away at her studies so they can take care of themselves when bowing time approaches. The past summer, she and her mother were with Mrs. Chapin at the latter's place in Black Point, Niantic, Conn. Speaking of Black Point reminds me that Miss McCook's uncle, Justice Philip McCook, of the New York Supreme Court, also has a summer home at Black Point, and that families of the two Thanksgiving debutantes came to know each other there.

Not long ago Miss Kirk's mother left for the West Coast to join Capt. Kirk, who is assigned to duty on the S. S. California, is now in Long Beach and will not return East for her daughter's debut. The bud's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, however, are spending the winter here and will be present at the party.

Miss McCook and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McCook, of Pasadena, Calif., who arrived with her in Boston from the West Coast the early part of last month, have taken a house there for a few weeks. Shortly after they came East Miss McCook made her bow to New York society at a dance given by her aunt, Mrs. Junius S. Morgan, at the latter's estate, Salutation, at Glen Cove, Long Island. And before the deb comes to the Capital she will be presented by her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Converse, of Four Winds, Westwood, Mass.

According to present plans, Miss McCook's visit to the Capital will be brief. Shortly after her debut party she and her parents will return to California for Christmas. Miss McCook is a graduate of Miss Porter's school at Farmington, Conn., and La Petite Ecole, Florence, Italy.

Her aunt, Mrs. McCook Knox, and the latter's daughter, Miss Kathleen Knox, came back to the Capital a few days ago from Maine, where they spent most of the summer. At present Mrs. Knox is busy making arrangements to store her furniture and move from 2101 Connecticut avenue to the Anchorage.

Phillips Gallery Opening Today Draws Notables

Prominent members of society will attend the opening of the Phillips Memorial Gallery today. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips—he is the founder of this important art center—will no doubt be on hand, as will other leaders in Capital art circles.

On view in the main gallery will be new decorations by Augustus Vincent Tack, and European and American colorists, panels purchased at the biennial exhibition at the Corcoran last spring. Also on exhibition will be Picasso's "Bull Fight" and Raoul Dufy's "Polo," as well as oils and water colors by Demuth, Marin, Dove, Davis, Klee and Knaths.

In the print rooms of the gallary will be exhibited drawings an etchings by Aristide Maillol and drawings by Pierre Bonnard, a sequel to the group shown last year.

Studio House, an adjunct of the Phillips Gallery, will open its doors on Monday when an exhibition illustrating methods of color reproduction will be the drawing card. In a number of instances the originial painting will be hung beside the print for comparison.

Former Capital Students to Wed

Of interest to Washington are announcements of an engagement and an approaching marriage of two former students in the Capital.

Maj. and Mrs. Schoolfield Grace, of Locust Valley, Long Island, have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Frances Sloan Worrall, to George Edgar Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mortimer Ward, of that place. Miss Stella Rae Carter, daughter of Mrs. Oliver Goldsmith Carter, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has completed plans for her marriage to Alvah Weeks Haff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Cornell Haff, of Brooklyn.

The latter's wedding on October 15 will be witnessed only by the two families and a few friends, owing to the recent death of the prospective bride's father. Her matron of honor and only attendant will be Mrs. G. Peter Cowenhoven, and the ceremony will take place at the bride's home. Dr. Allison Jones Vossler will be best man.

Miss Worrall, who is the daughter of the late Frank Inloes Worrall, will be married to Mr. Ward late in the fall. The bridegroom-to-be is a graduate of the Choate School and attended Stevens Institute.

Robert W. Blisses, Mrs. Adolph Miller Will Return Soon

Three prominent members of Washington society who have been spending the summer in California are expected to return to their homes here within the next week or two.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will open their home, Dumbarton Oaks, in Georgetown, early this month after having spent several months at their home near Santa Barbara. Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller is expected to return October 9 to her home at 2230 S street from a visit to the West Coast.

Marriage Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Myrle C. Loomis, of Arlington, Va., announce the marriage of their daughter, Grace Alyne, to Edgar L. Hurley, September 4, at Rockville, Md. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lillie Hurley, of Arlington.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

SOCIETY WENT out on the town last evening in razzle dazzle fashion, and between 8 o'clock and dawn was swingin' it at two popular night clubs. The Heigh Ho, smelling faintly of fresh paint, and the Pall Mall room at the Raleigh, chromiumed to the last inch, opened wide their doors to an eager public which hadn't seen them since last spring.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Compared to New York, Washington is 'way behind the game as far as patronizing night clubs is concerned. Cafe society scarcely exists hereabouts, except among the younger set. Most of our famous hostesses prefer to entertain at home, even if it means adding a couple of wings for a big party, as Evalyn Walsh McLean did last year for her famous New Year's ball. Many of our social leaders still have the palatial Victorian plush palaces built by their grandfathers, to say nothing of the 54 velvet-carpeted embassies and legations which afford sumptuous settings for social events.

Be that as it may, however, everybody and his guests turned out last night. Patrons of the Heigh Ho gasped as they saw the new decorations of blue and silver brocade and dubonnet carpets in that stronghold of baronial Tudor architecture. Orchids for the ladies and boutonniers for the men were on the house last evening, and the English dance team with a Latin name—Lunina and Lattanz—executed several snappy Continental numbers.

Philip Braod, of the British Embassy, entertained a large party of friends. From his table could be seen Christine Ekengren, wearing black velvet with gardenia at her shoulder. She was in a party with Peter McHerd and Napier Parlato.

Patsy Parker was one of several who wore white. She had placed her gardenias in her hair. Included in her group was the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Hector Leguizamon; Miss Lucy Sharp, in the black hat with a striped jacket; Peggy Gibbons, daughter of Gen. Gibbons; Rebecca Trucco, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, and her brother, Manuel.

Returns Home.

Mrs. James Hughes has returned to her home in White Plains, N. Y., after spending a short time in Washington. She formerly resided here.

D.C. Women Of G.O.P. to Open Year

Record Crowd Expected for Meeting Monday at Mayflower.

Mme. Cantacuzene Will Lead Organization in Active Season.

Under the generalship of Mme. Cantacuzene, granddaughter of Gen. U. S. Grant, the Republican women of the District of Columbia are preparing for a winter of activity under the banner of the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia. The league is now well established in its new headquarters at 1301 Seventeenth street northwest, and Mme. Cantacuzene and a corps of other officials of the league and workers are there early every morning.

The first important event of the season will not be held at the headquarters, however, but at the Mayflower Hotel, as a record crowd is expected to attend the meeting at 2:30 p. m. on Monday, when the speaker will be the president of the National Republican Club, John R. Davies. Mr. Davies will tell the Republican women "What women can do in the present crisis," which will be something of a slogan for the year's work.

Before the meeting, Mme. Cantacuzene will entertain at a luncheon at the Mayflower. There will be a board meeting at the clubhouse headquarters Monday morning.

Mme. Cantacuzene is proud of the fact that the Republican women have recovered from a natural discouragement after the last election, and points with pride to the clubhouse buzzing with activity. After the election, the Republican League, because they had contributed all their funds to the "cause," had to leave their clubhouse and take a small room at the Raleigh Hotel. When Mme. antacuzene was elected president she went house-hunting and found the present headquarters, secured funds to maintain and furnish it. She gave most of the furnishings herself. She says smilingly that she hopes the furniture will show wear and tear from use. Tea is served in the pleasant drawing rooms on the first floor almost every afternoon, the District league feeling socially responsible for the entertainment of Republican women leaders visiting in Washington.

It is also the object of the league to form contacts with women interested in patriotic and civic work. She feels that the spiritual part of the work is in a large degree in the hands of the women of the party. The plans of the league include the creating of a friendly atmosphere and maing all women welcome at the club.

The Washington league is regarded as of great importance by the leaders of the Republican Party, and therefore they take great satisfaction that Mme. Cantacuzene, who has been of great aid in the national party councils and work, should be guiding the destinies of the District league at this time.

The list of officers of the District league includes women whose names have always been familiar to the Washington public. Among them are Mrs. Frank Mondell, first vice president; Mrs. Charles Alger, second vice president; Mrs. Warren J. Haines, third vice president; Mrs. William Nuckles Doak, fourth vice president; Mrs. William Culbertson, fifth vice president; Mrs. Ruth Brown, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Leo Kauffman, recording secretary; Mrs. Hugh Southgate, acting treasurer, and Miss Daisy Daisy Prentice, auditor.

Among the members of the board of directors are Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher, Mrs. William Castle, Mrs. Bertram Snell, and Mrs. James R. Mann.

Mrs. Edward R. Gann, sister of the late former Vice President of the United States, Charles Curtis, is chairman of the advisory committee, and the honorary chairman is Mrs. Alvin T. Hert.

Other members of the advisory committee are Mrs. Russell B. Harrison, Mrs. Walter Edge, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. William Fitch Kelly, Mrs. A. E. Harriman, Mrs. Chester Bolton, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Mrs. David Reed, Mrs. Anne Archbold, and Mrs. Chauncey Depew.

Mrs. Hankins To Report on European Tour

Will Speak at Democratic Club Monday on Noted Women She Met.

Mrs. Charlotte Hankins, who has been making a special study of European courts and their powers to review legislation, for the American Association of University Women, will be the guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club Monday afternoon. Mrs. Hankin will speak on the famous women she met during her tour of Europe.

Mrs. Hankin found many interesting facts about the women in the countries she visited. Some of the conditions of women surprised her, for she did not find that women were as subservient as many American women believe.

In an advance statement sent out by the Woman's National Democratic Club it is pointed out that while Mrs. Hankin found that French women cannot vote, they can study subjects which do not necessarily take them out of the home.

Even in the case of her husband, law offices are in the home, and Mrs. Hankin is a bit uncertain whether the life partners may be law partners as well, since partnerships in law are prohibited in France. The relation between lawyer and clinet is as sacred as that of the doctor and patient, and the secluded atmosphere of the home is conductve to that idea.

The point is that Mrs. Hankin found women welcome in all the professions in France. There may be only one Mme. Curie, but Mmes. LeNoir and Blanc may make records for themselves in science if they are able to do so. Obstacles will not be put in their way.

In Russia a third of the judges are women. Nobody wears any particular insignia of office, and there is no pomp and very little ceremony. In the beginning of the Soviet regime the judges were appointed from the small literate groups, Communists preferred. This is no longer so, and under the new constitution the judges will be elected by the people. The juvenile courts come under the jurisdiction of the department of education. "There is no discrimination against women judges, as there is in France and most continental countries, except Czechoslovakia."

Mother, Sister to Join Maj. Strawbridge Here

Maj. B. M. Strawbridge, U. S. A., will be joined tomorrow by his mother and sister, Mrs. John Strawbridge and Miss Mabel Strawbridge, of Seattle, Wash. They will arrive by a Pennsylvania Central plane.

This will be a first flight for Mrs. Strawbridge, who is in her seventies. She visits her son in the East once or twice a year.

Last Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. John Walters, son and daughter-in-law of the Secretary, who live in Boise, Idaho, announced the birth of a son, who has been named for his grandfather, Theodore Augustus.

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1937 23

This Morning

Once Upon a Time in Miami.

By Shirley Povich.

I have it straight from Arch McDonald, who almost never prevaricates, that it actually happened in a Miami Beach horse-betting parlor a couple of years ago before the authorities suddenly discovered there was an antibetting law on the books and closed up the poolrooms.

POVICH.

Seems like there was a chap who made a very informal outing of visiting the betting establishment each afternoon and trying his luck with the ponies. The place was not so very far from the beach and the fellow came attired usually only in slippers, a bathing suit and a beach robe, took a chair and placed his bets very casually.

The place was probably Miami Beach's biggest horse-betting emporium, replete with run-down boards giving the entries, jockeys, odds and track conditions of the Hialeah and other winter tracks. Efficient flunkies announced all changes over an amplifying system, called the progress of each race as it was run. Drinks were served by the management and everything was most businesslike.

• • • •

But if our hero's attire was scanty, his bankroll wasn't. He began to attract the attention of the boss of the place with his prolific betting. Wagering $25 here and $50 there on most every race, the fellow took his losses with good grace—not even a bleat at the close finishes—and bounced back each following day to get four or five hundred bucks in the place, rarely winning a wager.

• • • •

In fact, the guy was having a horrible time of it even getting his horses in the money. But he registered no disappointment even when his horse didn't get a call during the running of the race. He was taking a bad beating, but the boss of the place feared any day that his client would become disgusted and cease the visits that were proving so profitable—to the boss.

• • • •

So, the poolroom owner who had been noting with increasing satisfaction the increase in size of our hero's losing bets, took his race-caller aside on day and spilled into his ear, the following:

• • • •

"Say, listen: I don't know how long this sucker is gonna keep coming in here and dropping all that dough to us, but we've got to do something or we'll lose him. Nothing he has bet on has even gotten a call among the first four horses lately and howinell he keep betting, I dunno. We gotta give him some kind of a thrill pretty quick.

• • • •

You've got those earphones on up there at the board and nobody else knows how they're running. No matter where his next horse runs, give this fellow a thrill. Call his horse second or third at the start or in the stretch and it'll keep his courage up and he won't run out on us. Understand?"

• • • •

The race-caller said sure, he understood, and he'd give the fellow a thrill in the next race and the boss said Attaboy, that's playing it smart.

Well, our hero must have been especially well heeled on the day that Arch McDonald was speaking about because he looked up at the board, saw the No. 2 horse, Kawagoe, posted as a 20-1 shot and calmly wrote out a bet of $200 across the board on No. 2.

• • • •

The boss took the bet, showed it to the flunky with the earphones, and then winked broadly. He got an understanding wink in reply and 10 minutes later the race was off. No. 2 was still 20 to 1.

"They're off in the second at Hialeah," droned the guy with the earphones . . . "No. 5 running first . . . No. 1 second . . . No. 2 third . . . No. 6 is fourth."

• • • •

The boss from his high stool behind the cashier's cage, winked again at his man and nodded approvingly. That was the stuff.

"At the quarter—the same way No. 5 first, by a length; No. 1 by a half, No. 2 by two, No. 6 by a length."

• • • •

"At the half—No. 5 by a length, No. 2 by a head. No. 1 by two, No. 7 by a half."

• • • •

That was the stuff all right, nice work, the boss man implied as he caught another look from the guy with the ear phones and again nodded approvingly.

"At the three-quarters, No. 5 by a length, No. 2 by two, No. 1 by a length, No. 8 by a half," came the next call and the boss by now was smiling broadly. The fellow with the ear phones continued to listen. Came his next call.

"In the stretch . . . No. 2 by eight lengths, it's a breeze AND I AIN'T KIDDING!

Wes Ferrell Gives Boston Club 7 Hits

Pictures of the Nats' last day on the home grounds appear on Page 25.

By Shirley Povich.

On the sour note of a 9-3 beating by the Red Sox, the Nats bowed out of Griffith Stadium yesterday in their farewell home appearance of the 1937 season. But they got no worse than a draw for the day, because they won the opening game of the double-header, 4 to 3.

Their victory in that first game was chiefly the handiwork of Wesley Cheek Farrell, who restricted his old Red Sox playmates to seven hits, struck out seven and remained upright through a three-run attack that tied the score in the seventh inning.

But in that second game, the Sox squared accounts with young Ray Phebus, who has used 'em as stooges in his big league debut last month when he held 'em to one hit and won a 1-0 game. They swatted Phebus out of the box in five innings and renewed a 13-hit attack against young Bucky Jacobs.

Jack Wilson held the Nats to seven hits in the second game and was pitching three-hit ball for seven innings before a cheap triple off Jimmy Wasdell's bat jarred him out of his shut-out dreams. In that seventh, the Nats made their only three runs of the ball game.

Both Ferrell and Phebus ran into a heap of trouble against Fabian Gaffke, the Red Sox outfielder who has been on a home-run hitting binge during the series. Gaffke whacked out a home run and a triple against Ferrell in the first game and reached Phebus for a home run and a single in the second.

It was Fabian's homer that gave the Sox their first run of the second game—in the second inning, and they picked up another run off Phebus in the next session after Sington lost Wilson's fly in the sun. His own error and another by Lewis caused Phebus to give up another run to the Sox in the third but in the fourth the rookie was entirely to blame for the three runs the Sox scored. He walked two hitters, pitched doubles to Foxx and Peacock and singles to Chapman and Gaffke.

That all contrived to make it 6-0 in favor of the Red Sox and the Nats only prolonged the agony of it all when they scored three runs in the eighth on Sington's single, Wasdell's cheap triple, Buddy Myer's legitimate three-bagger and Millies' single.

Up to that point, a double by Myer, Lewis' infield hit and a fluke single by Stone was the extent of the damage permitted by Wilson, whose fast ball was coming out of the shadows with terrific speed.

G. W. Opens Season Meeting Wake Forest

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A small but potent band of doughty Deacons from Wake Forest invade Griffith Stadium tonight to help George Washington University's representatives rip the wrappings off their 1937 campaign. The kick-off is scheduled for 8 p. m.

Shorn of most of the men who came within some six seconds of upsetting the Colonials midway in last season, Wake Forest enters the fray a lightly regarded underdog, supposedly needing nothing short of a modern miracle to outscore the highly touted downtown aggregation. The odds are 5-1, with the Deacons on the long end of the money.

Both teams will be missing a couple of valuable men when they start down the field, but George Washington's losses will not be felt as keenly as those of its guest. The Deason's biggest loss is Capt. "Boots" Mumford, brilliant center and a bulwark on defense, who is still on crutches as a result of meeting up with an accident in last week's Tennessee game.

Wheeler Dale, a 155-pounder, has been assigned Mumford's position, and will be one of three new faces in the visitors' line-up. One is Forest Glass, senior end, who played a bang-up game against Tennessee after substituting late in the first half. His kicking, passing and defensive play was of high caliber. The other is Jim Pittman, sophomore halfback, who did not play against the Vols, but whose practice showing won a regular position during the past week. He scales only 150 pounds.

George Washington's startling line-up will include a veteran backfield comprised of Bruce Mahan, Joey Kaufman, "Nig" Tihila and Elmer Hogg. Jay Turner, originally scheduled to start a fullback, will be used only sparingly, because of a badly wrenched ankle. This quartet packs a terrific scoring punch, and has all the necessary defensive equipment to give a good account of itself in that respect.

Barring major conflagrations or Divine intervention, the Colonials should smear it on their opponents by a comfortable margin—say three or four touchdowns.

Terry Ill as Club Takes 15th Pennant

Alan Gould, sports editor of the Associated Press, compares the infields of the Giants and the Yankees in the third of a series on the World Series. See Page 26.

By George Kirksey.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Sept. 30.—Now all the Giants have to worry about is the Yankees. Their National League problems ended today in Philadelphia when they clinched the pennant by defeating the Phillies, 2 to 1.

Carl Hubbell, Giants' southpaw ace, scored his twenty-second triumph—more than any other major league hurler this season—in pitching the deciding game. Hubbell's five-hit victory quieted talk that the "old master" isn't ready to pitch the opening game at Yankee Stadium Wednesday.

The Giants' triumph gives New York a monopoly on the world series for the fifth time. In four previous all-New York World series the Yankees have won two (1923 and 1936) and the Giants two (1921 and 1922). The Yanks are 2 to 1 betting favorites for the 1937 "subway series" but why bring that up now?

This is the Giants' hour of triumph and all the bouquets should go to the newly crowned National League champions for the gamest exhibition of the baseball year. Rated third choice in the betting odds at the start of the season, the Giants hung on with bitter grimness in the face of adversity of almost every variety and closed in a blazing finish which brought New York its fifteenth National League championship, more than any other city. It was the Giants' third triumph in five years under "Memphis Bill" Terry, a record equalled by no other active major league manager.

Terry, a man of many moods, was deprived of the opportunity of celebrating his team's victory. He is confined to his suite in a New York hotel, recovering from a serious siege of influenza. Dr. R. C. Palmer, attending physician, has ordered Terry to remain in bed until Sunday and maybe longer.

"Terry is still running a temperature," said Dr. Palmer. "He is not dangerously ill, but he is considerably weakened by the flu attack, which made great headway before we brought it under control."

The Giants have been under the direction of Coach Pancho Snyder, an old Giants' catcher during John J. McGraw's regime, since Terry's illness. Snyder kept the Giants moving at a brisk pace, winning six out of seven until they clinched the pennant today.

The Giants' path to the pennant never was strewn with roses. They put on a comeback during August and September, which in some respects was even more remarkable than their drive from fifth place to the flag a year ago.

In most baseball quarters the Giants were counted out of the race in early August when the Cubs lengthened their lead to seven games, but Terry refused to concede Chicago the flag. Injuries to key men like Dick Bartell and Gus Mancuso failed to rattle Terry. He made trades, juggled his players and kept driving his team until he found the winning combination in mid-August.

On August 3 the Cubs led the league by seven games, and as late as August 13 still were 6½ games on top. Then Rip Collins broke his leg and the Cubs began to fade. The Giants, with Mel Ott shifted to third, Jimmy Ripple playing rightfield and Harry Danning catching, kept driving forward until they hit the top September 1. And then all through September they clung savagely to the lead, beating back the Cubs in a critical three-game series at Wrigley Field after losing the first game.

From August 3 until they won the deciding game today, the Giants played at a .722 clip, winning 39 games and losing 15. One of the big factors in their triumph was the final Western trip, during which esthey won 8 out of 11 games.

The two biggest days in the Giants' blazing finish were August 25 and September. On those two dates they beat the Cubs and broke the heart of the Chicago team. On the August date the Cubs went into the ninth inning of the first game of a double-header leading, 7 to 2. A victory would have put Chicago five games in front, but the Giants refused to surrender. They staged a ninth-inning rally to put over five runs and won in the eleventh, 8 to 7. They won the second game and cut the Cubs' lead to two games. Then in Chicago they won another dramatic 8-to-7 game, staving off the Cubs in a desperate ninth-inning finish. That triumph labeled the Giants as champions.

Laurel to Open Tomorrow With $7,500 Added Capital Handicap

Sprint Tops Program at Nearby Oval

Post Time 1:30 P. M. for 25-day Meet; Horses Plentiful.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Laurel, Md., Sept. 30.—The cream of America's and Canada's race horses are arriving hourly by train and motor van for the 25-day meeting of the Maryland State Fair, which opens at 1:30 p. m. Saturday.

Race Secretary John P. Turner, sr., will offer nine stakes, with the $7,500 Capital Handicap, ¾-mile sprint, headlining Saturday's opening program.

During the past summer General Manager Frank Brady spent close to $100,000 remodeling the place. New stables have been built and it is now possible to accommodate 1,400 horses. Free parking space to handle 10,000 automobiles has also been arranged. The electrical camera, which photographed all finishes at Empire City, N. Y., will be used throughout this meeting. An electrical board in the center-field will show the progress of the first five horses at every pole. A 50-foot press stand has been located at the top of the huge grandstand; while everything has been dressed up in a new coat of green and white paint.

Richard Johnson, first president of the Maryland State Fair, and Spalding Lowe Jenkins, who succeeded him, will both be honored with memorial races. Both men did much for this plant and General Manager Brady and his associates have struck a popular chord with turfites by booking races in memory of the late presidents. The Johnson will be run October 9, with the Jenkins on October 30. Both races carry $5,000 added money.

Race Secretary John P. Turner, sr., will program eight races on the days a steeplechase is arranged. Horsemen on this side of the Atlantic were extremely generous with their nominations for the nine stakes to be run this month. Turner, sr., secured 695 nominations or an average of slightly over 77 per stake.

Jesse Bennet, custodian of the jockeys' room, reports that such topnotch riders as Sonny Workman, Harry Richards, Alfred Robertson, Eddie DeCamillis, Georgie Woolf, Lloyd Knapp, Hilton Dabson, Jackie Westrope, Ralph Eccard, Nick Wall, Basil James, Eddie Arcaro, Bobby Merritt, Johnny Longden, Johnny Bejshak and Joe Renick will all don silks during the 25 days' sport.

Tigers Lose But Clinch 2d Position

St. Louis, Sept. 30.—The Detroit Tigers clinched second place in the American League today even though they were overwhelmed by the St. Louis Browns, 10-3.

Assurance of runner-up position to the Yankees came when the third place Chicago White Sox lost a double-header to the Cleveland Indians. The Tigers now are four games ahead of the Sox and each team has three games to play.

Minnesota's Golden Gophers and Pittsburgh's Panthers are locked in a virtual tie for national leadership as the 1937 football season rounds the first turn. Their difference-by-score playing power is less than a touchdown scoring point.

The Gophers engage the seventh-place Nebraska Cornhuskers this Saturday. Anything can happen in this game as the Cornhuskers are playing in their own back yard.

Jock Sutherland's prodigees tackle a tougher foe than Ohio Wesleyan when they engage the West Virginia eleven at Morgantown. The game is only a breather for Pitt and will prepare the Panthers for the Duquesne gridders on the following week-end.

The Buckeyes of Ohio State trounced the Horned Frogs of T. C. U. exactly by the two touchdowns that the Difference-by-Score system predicted. The field was damp and the "razzle-dazzle" little, yet Coach Schmidt's charges outplayed, outcharged and overcame the fierce Texas in one of the toughest of the early intersection games.

Many important games loom to the front for this week's skirmishes. Arkansas plays Texas Christian, and other skirmishes match Army and Clemson, Boston College and Kansas State, California and Oregon State, Carnegie Tech and N. Y. U., Colorado and Missouri, Cornell and Colgate, Duquesne and West Virginia Wesleyan, Manhattan and Texas A. and M., Michigan and Michigan State, Minnesota and Nebraska, North Carolina and North Carolina State, Northwestern and Iowa State, Ohio State and Purdue, Oklahoma and Rice, Oregon and Stanford, Southern California and Washington, Temple and Mississippi, Southern Methodist and Centenary, Tulane and Auburn, Vanderbilt and Chicago, West Virginia and Pittsburgh, Wisconsin and Marquette and Xavier and Kentucky.

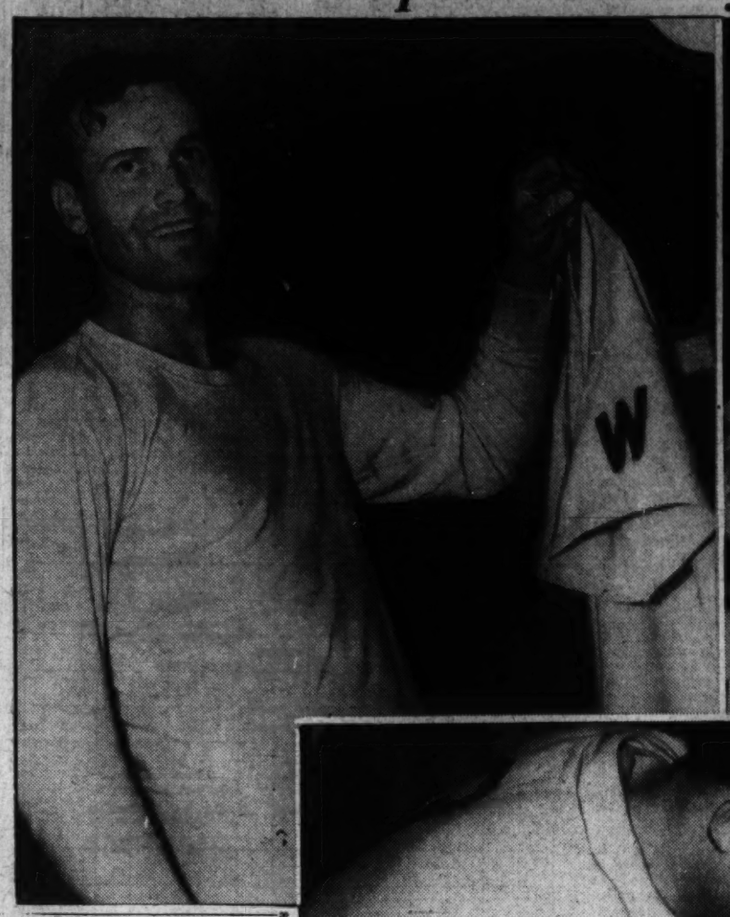
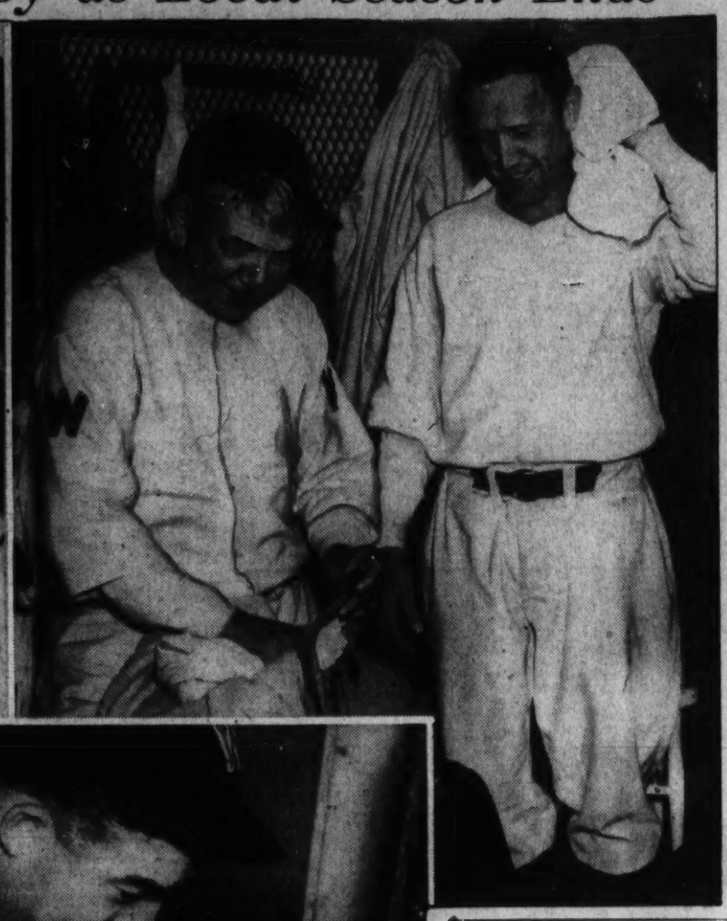
Nats Bid Capital Good-by as Local Season Ends





A rather dismal season was closed by the Nationals yesterday as they split a double-header with the Red Sox, but the gloom that hovers over a sixth-place club's locker room was absent at the conclusion of the second game. For it was the last home game and the boys began packing for the trip home which means hunting and fishing. Upper left, Wesley Ferrell hangs up his home uniform shirt for the last time, while Nick Altrock, aided by Earl McNeely (upper right), packs his bag. Lower, Al Simmons removes valuables from the safety deposit box for the last time this season.

Bees Sting Brooklyn By 5-2,3-2

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 30.—The Brooklyn Dodgers stretched their losing streak to 14 straight games today by dropping both ends of a double-header to the Boston Bees. They lost the opener, 5 to 2, to Danny MacFayden's effective pitching, and the nightcap, 3 to 2, on Ray Mueller's homer.

Archibald Asks $3,000 To Meet Lou

Joey Archibald, the Providence (R. I.) puncher who has become a local fighting favorite, yesterday refused to meet Lou Gevinson, popular young Southwest boxer, on the charity show to set up a fund for lunches for needy school children.

Archibald demanded a $3,000 guarantee and assurance that Gevinson would come into the ring at 125 pounds. Both of the demands are impossible, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced, turning down the Archibald manifesto.

Inspired by Dean Fitzpatrick of Columbia Law School, a group of prominent Washingtonians prepared a telegram last night which will be sent to Al Weill, Archibald's behind-the-screens man, who also acts as matchmaker for the Twentieth Century Club in New York.

If the Archibald fight falls through, efforts will be made to bring in Danny London as Gevinson's foe. London holds a victory over Jeffra and recently kayoed Johnny Pena.

Columbus Red Birds Take Second Straight

Newark, N. J., Sept. 30 (AP).—Columbus' Red Birds, champions of the American Association, slammed their way into a two-game lead in the little world series tonight by beating the Newark Bears, the so-called "wonder team" of the International League, 5 to 4, in a hectic 11-inning battle.

President's Cup Won by Mrs. Dowdall

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Playing her home course in 88 strokes and deducting a 6 handicap for a net 82, Mrs. J. F. Dowdall won the annual play for the President's Plate yesterday at Congressional. A field of 48 past and present officers and committee members of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association, competed.

Mrs. Roland MacKenzie won the gross prize with an 89 after Mrs. Dowdall elected to take the main trophy, donated several years ago by Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, a former president of the association. Mrs. Mackenzie played the nines in 46 and 43 to the winner's pair of 44's.

Mrs. R. E. Joyce, Kenwood, won second low net with 102—23, 79. She was not eligible for the plate as it was for players of 18 and under handicap. Mrs. E. M. Amick, Columbia, won third low net with 97—14, 83, while Mrs. W. R. Bush, also of the host club, took fourth low net, winning in a draw over Mrs. R. E. Burks, of the same club. Mrs. Bush scored 96—10, 86.

High net awards were won by Mrs. F. J. Kennedy, Indian Spring, 112; Mrs. R. A. Lacey, Columbia; Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring, and Mrs. Frank Kramer, Beaver Dam, all deadlocked at 106.

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, president of the Women's Golf Association, presented Mrs. Dowdall with a desk set and all nonwinners received consolation prizes of a golf ball at a cocktail party following the play, with Mrs. Payne as hostess.

Mrs. Dowdall, a frequent winner in the events over the season's play, started with an eight, but settled down and recorded only one hole over five for the remainder of the nine, including treys on three and nine. She continued her consistent scoring on the return trip, finishing with a par 4.

Four bad holes marred Mrs. MacKenzie's card, two on each nine. The wife of the host professional played steady golf on the remainder of the holes, however, to annex the gross honors.

Central Battles Wash-Lee

Roosevelt Team Meets Bullis Prep

By Jack Munhall

Central High School, with an eye to that old saying "if once you try and don't succeed, try, try again," will bid for its first football victory of the season this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Central Stadium, when the powerful Washington and Lee eleven is scheduled to invade.

Meanwhile, Roosevelt's question mark team will receive the charge of Bullis Prep in the Roosevelt Stadium at the same hour in the opening game for both clubs.

Central, writhing under consecutive 6-0 losses to Gonzaga and then East Side, has been whipped into a fighting mood for this third game by Coach Hardy Pearce, who has more than one reason for wanting to defeat the Virginians.

The primary incentive for Pearce's action is a feeling that another loss, particularly by a close score, will tend to lessen the confidence of his team which needs bolstering with the important inter-high series looming in the near future. There is also a personal angle attached, for Washington and Lee is coached by Johnny Baker, a lifelong friend of Pearce's, but a real rival in a coaching way.

Central will present the same line-up followed in the previous games, with but two exceptions. Hugh Cramer, all-high tackle, will be shifted to the backfield in an attempt to add power and a good blocker and also to allow Bill Ickes, a good ball carrier, an opportunity to lug the leather. Ickes has been seen seldom in a running role this season because he is the best blocker on the team, but the weakness of the attack as now constituted has prompted Pearce to the experiment.

Roosevelt followers are counting on six veterans to lead a redemption for the trouncing suffered at the hands of Bullis last season. These are Fred Mundy, Joe Kolker, Ed Vasvary, Dutch Holland, Joe Fraber and John Brennan.

Cox Loses Mat Bout to Hanson

Bennah Bortnick, the roly-poly watermelon king of Water street, won the principal laurels last night in the weekly wrestling show at Turner's Arena, and suffered an injured shoulder and stepped-on toe in return. It all happened because two of the decisions Bennah rendered weren't exactly pleasing to the losers.

His main bout was with Joe Cox, appearing in the feature match with Billy Hanson. Bortnick disqualified Cox after 53 minutes of catch-as-catch-can bone-bending—the longest match of the season, incidentally, and immediately found himself knee deep in hot water. In the ensuing melee Cox stepped on Bennah's big toe and bruised his shoulder before the hapless melon merchant was rescued.

Before this Bortnick bumped into trouble in the Irish personage of George Lenihan, who struggled 30 minutes to a draw with Nick Campofreda—only to have the referee award Campofreda the decision because of his "sportsmanlike" conduct.

In other bouts Al Mercier drew with Henry Piers, and ditto for Bill Sledge and Dr. Fred Meyers. Abe Kashey won the only clearcut victory of the night, throwing Joe Maynard after 14 minutes.

Giant Infield Rated Better Than Yankees'

(Note: This is the third of a series of stories analyzing the Yankees and Giants and their World Series chances.)

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Sept. 30.—Like a sturdy football line standing helplessly while forward passes soar over their heads for long gains, the inner defense of the Giants may hear the discouraging whistle of basehits headed for the wide open spaces—if you believe all you hear about the bombardment the Yankees intend to turn loose in the world series.

For the time being, there is no dispute from this corner about the superior run-making power of the world champions. Passing for the moment a growing notion that the Yankees are a soft touch for first-class southpaw pitching, we offer for today's speculation the evidence that the Giants have a pronounced superiority around the infield, collectively speaking.

Lou Gehrig, of course, dominates first base as well as the Yankee attack. The iron man of New Rochelle may not be quite as agile as when he began his indestructible career a dozen years ago, but he is still baseball's No. 1 first baseman, steady on the defense and a threat every time he steps to the plate.

Yet such are the vagaries of World Series fortune that his rival on the Giants, Long John McCarthy, might steal the show. McCarthy's comeback is one of the most startling of the Giants' late season surge. In midyear he was replaced by Sam Leslie and generally labelled by sports writers as a "$40,000 bust." Leslie's hand injury gave McCarthy another chance. The former Chicago sandlot star seized it with both hands. He has made plays that remind fans of the defensive skill of Bill Terry himself and his bat, singing a .340 tune for the past month, has been potent.

McCarthy, in short, is the type who might well be cast in the hero's role for a club that has been demonstrating for weeks that anything can happen, particularly the unexpected.

Conceding Gehrig's marked advantages on form, however, the fact rmains that the rest of the Giants' infield has a decided edge, both offensively and defensively.

The Yankees will go into the series with the same combination they used last year, whereas the Giants have two conspicuous replacements, with McCarthy in the spot where Terry hobbled through the 1936 series, on a bad knee, and Mel Ott, a newcomer at third base. Travis Jackson closed his big league playing career at third in the last World Series. Lou Chiozza was obtained during the winter from the Phillies to fill the gap but the pennant drive of the Giants dates from the shift of Ott from rightfield to third base.

Rated off little more than a month's play, Ott comes close to being the best third sacker in the majors. His Yankee rival, Robert (Red) Rolfe has a fielding edge, on paper, but he hasn't Ott's flair on the defense nor the Giant star's power at the plate. Ott's .289 average doesn't give a correct picture. It's the product of a prolonged slump from which the little slugger didn't emerge until August.

The keystone combination of Dick Bartell and Burgess Whitehead is something for Giant rooters to cheer about. If it isn't the best defensive duo in either league it will do until another comes along to prove to the contrary. It outshines the Yankee pair, Frankie Crosetti and Tony Lazzeri. As a double play manipulator the Giant combination is far in front.

Lazzeri is one of the smartest infielders in baseball, but he is winding up his career in the big show this year, on his own admission. He can't begin to cover the ground that Whitehead does and though he carries much more power in his bat, his stickwork hasn't been as useful as his rival's. Don Heffner, a slick fielder, is Lazzeri's understudy.

Bartell, on this year's record, excels Crosetti in every vital department of play. The Giant shortstop has a trolley wire arm, generally is at his best under pressure and is enjoying a .300 season with his bat.

If there is need for replacements the Giants have the old slogan man, Blondy Ryan, as well as Chiozza, but nothing short of serious mishap will afford either a chance to do infield duty. The Giants have no worries about their first line of defense.

Loyola Eleven Scheduled to Arrive Today

The second half of tomorrow's football attraction at Brookland, Loyola of the South, is scheduled to arrive in Washington early this morning, and after a brief bit of sightseeing repair to the scene of battle for a final pregame workout.

Thirty-two strong, the Wolfpack is coming to town confident of returning with their second consecutive victory over the Cardinals, who suffered a surprising 6-0 defeat last year. This is Loyola's first season under the tutelage of "Moon" Mullins, one of the late Knute Rockne's last great fullbacks, and the team displayed a potent scoring punch last week in bowling over Spring Hill, 19-0.

Meanwhile Catholic University is beginning to wonder what became of "Dixie" Walker, industrious quarterback, who returned home because of illness in his family and has not been heard from since. Walker's loss will be a serious blow to the Cardinals' hopes for a good year.

"Dutch" Bergman yesterday intimated that he will depend on Johnny Fiorellino, southpaw passer, for yardage in tomorrow's game. The olive-skinned lad is understudying Quarterback Bud Munhall, but is certain to play much of the game. He is at his best on long distance pegs, and Bergman has built several plays of this character to utilize his talent.

Drive Launched To Better Heating In 7 D. C. Schools

A drive to repair boilers in the seven District schools still without heat was launched yesterday after two classes at the Petworth School had been dismissed because of frigid conditions.

Following a protest by mothers of Petworth School children, William A. Draper, District repair shop chief, said an attempt would be made to repair all defective heating apparatus within a week.

Delay in fixing the heating equipment was the result of the more comprehensive boiler inspection system begun this summer, Draper explained. Schools still without heat are Barrville, Birney, Cranch, Powell Junior High, Petworth, Webster and Stevens. Boilers in these schools, Draper said, are from 20 to 40 years old.

Ickes Sees Power Fund Shortage

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes intimated yesterday separate legislation might be necessary to complete allotment of funds for South Carolina's $37,500,000 Santee-Cooper Public Works power project.

Expressing doubt PWA's reserve fund would be large enough for a project of Santee-Cooper's size, Ickes said additional funds could be had by a separate appropriation. The Secretary's comment was made in connection with President Roosevelt's recent statement that no more PWA funds were available.

Korman Named Police Court Aide

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal stated yesterday that none of his assistants will be placed in charge of the legal staff at police court after the Commissioners, upon his recommendation, had appointed Milton D. Korman, of Washington, an assistant corporation counsel.

Korman, a protege of Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, will be assigned to the police court staff as successor to Rice Hooe, who resigned recently. Hooe was in charge of the corporation counsel's assistants at the court.

Korman, 32 years old, is a native of Washington, and was educated at Central High School, George Washington University, and Georgetown Law School.

Tax Ruling Frees Joint Property

Temporary regulations governing the new estate and inheritance taxes were adopted yesterday by the District Commissioners in order to eliminate a legal difficulty that has tied up certain joint estates.

Upon recommendation of Jo V. Morgan, special assistant corporation counsel, the commissioners ruled that joint bank deposits and other joint assets are not to be construed as assets of the estate of the deceased member.

Although the law is now effective, taxes will not be collected until next year.

Underwriters Announce New Business Year

By Thomas M. Cahill.

An interesting series of meetings for the new business year of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association will open Monday, in the Willard Hotel's large ball room, when that organization holds the first luncheon of the fall, under the leadership of Paul H. Primm, newly elected president.

Programs for the monthly meetings have been arranged during the summer and are planned to cover important questions that the public is asking life insurance companies and life insurance men and women in the field.

At Monday's session the association will hear O. J. Arnold, president of Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., of Minneapolis, discuss the subject, "Social Security Through Life Insurance." Mr. Arnold, a director of the United States Chamber of Commerce and chairman of its insurance committee, is also chairman of the board of directors of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, of Hartford, Conn., and a director of the American College of Life Underwriters, Philadelphia. These positions indicate his experience and ability to discuss "social security." One of the outstanding speakers at the convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters in Denver, Mr. Arnold' address here is anticipated as an inspirational beginning of the series.

Committees Apointed.

Mrs. Helen R. Sharpe, Bank of Commerce & Savings, chairman of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, has announced the following committees to promote the work of the group during its new administrative year.

Standardized Safe Deposit Practices—J. O. Lehmann, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, chairman; H. W. Ireland, American Security & Trust Co.; C. A. Ashton, Munsey Trust Co.; James E. Woltz, National Metropolitan Bank; Albert E. Fisher, Riggs National Bank.

Publicity and Education—Miss Eva Ricker, Riggs National Bank, chairman; A. P. Miller, Liberty National Bank; Mrs. Allene Weatherly, Bank of Commerce & Savings; John M. Boteler, National Savings & Trust Co.; Fred S. Beyer, Second National Bank; Miss Elizabeth Churchill, Union Trust Co.

Program—J. S. Cheney, American Security & Trust Co.; chairman; Robert Morgan, McLachlen Banking Corporation; Mrs. Kathryn S. Bowers, Hamilton National Bank; W. Clarence Miller, National Bank of Washington; E. Percival Wilson, National Savings & Trust Co.; William H. Harper, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Mrs. D. N. de Lozier, Second National Bank.

Investment Bankers.

Y. E. Booker, chief executive of the investment banking firm bearing his name, will head the local delegation to the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association to be held at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., November 3 to 7. Mr. Booker is a member of the board of governors of the association.

In its border aspects, this year's program will adhere closely to the type that has made meetings so successful in the past and will be designed primarily to outline and clarify numerous problems confronting members of the profession and their clientele. Emphasis is placed upon the forum sessions where open and informal discussions will be held. There will be five forums in the program which is being prepared, and which will include prominent speakers.

A delegation of investment bankers will attend the annual fall meeting of the southeastern group of the Investment Bankers Association, at the Merchants Club, in Baltimore, today. Robert S. Belknap, of Alexander Brown & Sons, Baltimore, has been named chairman of the group to succeed John Redmond, jr., of that city.

Other nominations are: C. Prevost Boyce, Baltimore, vice president; R. S. Dickson, Charlotte, N. C., vice chairman; William H. Price 3rd, Baltimore, secretary treasurer; J. Elliott Irvine, Baltimore; Y. E. Booker, Washington, D. C.; John C. Legg, jr., and John C. Hagen, Baltimore, members of the executive committee. Wallace H. Fulton, director, Investment Bankers Conference, Inc., Washington, will be the guest speaker.

An interesting program for the fall meeting of the new administrative year of the District of Columbia Bankers Association is being arranged by Hilleary G. Hoskinson, a vice president of Riggs National Bank and first vice president of the bankers group. The meeting is scheduled for October 18, at 4 p. m., in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co. There will be a guest speaker.

Two hundred and sixty-four junior banking men and women have already enrolled in this year's first semester classes of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. Enrollments in two more classes are expected to bring this number to 285, (total of last year's enrollment), or even higher.

New York, Sept. 30.—Financial markets were inclined to settle into ruts. Stocks did well at the start, but grew a little sulky and hung back in the later trading, closing irregularly on a turnover of around 1,000,000 shores, the smallest since last Thursday. Government bonds were firm. French spot francs were a little harder and futures were steadier.

Developments of the day seemed to have little influence on stocks. Prices hardened and softened over a narrow range largely in response to the hourly changes in short turn trading sentiment. Reports were received of the blowing out of blast furnaces by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation in the Pittsburgh district, of further consideration of the railroad wage matter, and hints were given that President Roosevelt has not given up the idea of a special session of Congress.

Tax Outlook.

The matter of a special session probably did something to hold down sentiment on the market, for Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau took the opportunity to say that nothing heretofore done or promised would prevent a program of higher taxation to be presented to the next Congress. Higher taxes nevertheless scarcely can come as a surprise to any one; they might as well be regarded as inevitable, although not by any means as necessarily bringing the budget into balance.

Retail Trade.

Metal markets may have gained some reassurance from the fractional rise in copper, after two 1-cent-a-pound reductions announced by the customs smelters in the last two days. The latest cut, which was followed by producers, suggests that the fall has gone as far as it will, for a while at least, and therefore may result in a large buying movement. Pessimists on the state of retail trade also were given something to cheer them in the report for this dsitrict by the Federal Reserve Bank on department store sales. Sales were found to have been 2 per cent above a year ago, with the usual rise from August. Chain store sales, on the other hand, were somewhat lower than last year, but wholesale trade rose. Taking into consideration the higher price levels it is apparent that the volume of retail trade has fallen, but not enough to warrant the pessimism found in some quarters.

Early Prices Best.

Most stocks were fractionally higher at the opening, but declines were more numerous than they were later until the market tired around the lunch hour. Copper shares were firm throughout on the sudden reversal in the price for the metal. Prices ran up 1 to 2 points in the copper group. Steel managed to run up a fraction to above 83, but that early price was not held.

In the late trading prices turned easier and most of the average gains of 1 to 2 points during the happiest periods of the day were given up. Resistance stiffened when prices approached the previous closing levels. Rails retreated from their advanced positions occupied during the morning.

A long list of preferred stocks climbed 1 to 4 points. American Can recrossed par for a rise of more than 3 points. Farm implements hardened 1 to 4 points. Radio replaced Steel as the leading active issue. It had a turnover of more than 40,000 shares in the first three hours at higher prices.

September Trading.

Stock trading volume in September for the 25 trading sessions was slightly in excess of 34,000,000 shares, the largest since April. It compares with 17,212,000 shares for August, and with 30,872,000 shares for September of last year. The biggest day this month was the thirteenth, with 2,561,000 shares. Sales of 690,000 shares on the third were the smallest. Sales exceeded 2,000,000 shares on five days and 1,000,000 shares on six days. On two Saturday sessions—the eleventh and twenty-fifth—sales volume exceeded 1,000,000 shares each.

Concentration.

The concentration of stock trading in September is shown by the fact that the 15 most active stocks made up 25 per cent of total sales. United States Steel led with a turnover of more than 1,000,000 shares, the largest for that stock during any month since July, 1933, when the first flush of inflation under the New Deal was on. Radio came next with more than 800,000 shares. Others were General Motors, 650,000; New York Central, 580,000; Anaconda, 560,000; Republic Steel, 550,00; Paramount, 475,000; Chrysler, 450,000; Commonwealth & Southern, 530,000; International Nickel, 420,000; Socony-Vacuum, 400,000; General Electric, 375,000.

How Stocks Acted.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The French franc improved slightly yesterday as Paris advices carried rumors of prospective political alignments to bolster the fiscal position.

In spot transactions the unit rose .00⅝ of a cent at 3.42⅝ cents. There was some narrowing of discounts on forward francs. Budgetary proposals announced by Finance Minister Bonnet were studied closely in foreign exchange circles. The firmer tone of the currency was attributed to official support.

Sterling held to a narrow range, remaining about even with Wednesday's final rate at $4.95⅛. The belga declined a fraction to 16.84 cents, accompanied by banking gossip suggesting renewal of the flow of Belgian gold to New York.

Other currencies showed little change. In Paris the dollar closed at 3.424 cents to the franc, compared with the New York overnight of 3.417 cents. The dollar closed in London at 4.94⅛ to the pound, against the New York overnight of $4.95⅛.

Export Buying Fails to Rally Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30—Despite the largest export business in United States wheat this season, wheat prices here turned downward late today and ended with net losses all around.

A sharp break in quotations on October delivery of wheat at Winnipeg, together with an increase of hedging and spec lative selling pressure in the corn market did much to pull Chicago wheat values lower at the last.

Roosevelt Team Meets Bullis Prep

By Jack Munhall

Central High School, with an eye to that old saying "if once you try and don't succeed, try, try again," will bid for its first football victory of the season this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Central Stadium, when the powerful Washington and Lee eleven is scheduled to invade.

Meanwhile, Roosevelt's question mark team will receive the charge of Bullis Prep in the Roosevelt Stadium at the same hour in the opening game for both clubs.

Central, writhing under consecutive 6-0 losses to Gonzaga and then East Side, has been whipped into a fighting mood for this third game by Coach Hardy Pearce, who has more than one reason for wanting to defeat the Virginians.

The primary incentive for Pearce's action is a feeling that another loss, particularly by a close score, will tend to lessen the confidence of his team which needs bolstering with the important inter-high series looming in the near future. There is also a personal angle attached, for Washington and Lee is coached by Johnny Baker, a lifelong friend of Pearce's, but a real rival in a coaching way.

Central will present the same line-up followed in the previous games, with but two exceptions. Hugh Cramer, all-high tackle, will be shifted to the backfield in an attempt to add power and a good blocker and also to allow Bill Ickes, a good ball carrier, an opportunity to lug the leather. Ickes has been seen seldom in a running role this season because he is the best blocker on the team, but the weakness of the attack as now constituted has prompted Pearce to the experiment.

Roosevelt followers are counting on six veterans to lead a redemption for the trouncing suffered at the hands of Bullis last season. These are Fred Mundy, Joe Kolker, Ed Vasvary, Dutch Holland, Joe Fraber and John Brennan.

Cox Loses Mat Bout to Hanson

Bennah Bortnick, the roly-poly watermelon king of Water street, won the principal laurels last night in the weekly wrestling show at Turner's Arena, and suffered an injured shoulder and stepped-on toe in return. It all happened because two of the decisions Bennah rendered weren't exactly pleasing to the losers.

His main bout was with Joe Cox, appearing in the feature match with Billy Hanson. Bortnick disqualified Cox after 53 minutes of catch-as-catch-can bone-bending—the longest match of the season, incidentally, and immediately found himself knee deep in hot water. In the ensuing melee Cox stepped on Bennah's big toe and bruised his shoulder before the hapless melon merchant was rescued.

Before this Bortnick bumped into trouble in the Irish personage of George Lenihan, who struggled 30 minutes to a draw with Nick Campofreda—only to have the referee award Campofreda the decision because of his "sportsmanlike" conduct.

In other bouts Al Mercier drew with Henry Piers, and ditto for Bill Sledge and Dr. Fred Meyers, Abe Kashey won the only clearcut victory of the night, throwing Joe Maynard after 14 minutes.

Giant Infield Rated Better Than Yankees'

(Note: This is the third of a series of stories analyzing the Yankees and Giants and their World Series chances.)

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Sept. 30.—Like a sturdy football line standing helplessly while forward passes soar over their heads for long gains, the inner defense of the Giants may hear the discouraging whistle of basehits headed for the wide open spaces—if you believe all you hear about the bombardment the Yankees intend to turn loose in the world series.

For the time being, there is no dispute from this corner about the superior run-making power of the world champions. Passing for the moment a growing notion that the Yankees are a soft touch for first-class southpaw pitching, we offer for today's speculation the evidence that the Giants have a pronounced superiority around the infield, collectively speaking.

Lou Gehrig, of course, dominates first base as well as the Yankee attack. The iron man of New Rochelle may not be quite as agile as when he began his indestructible career a dozen years ago, but he is still baseball's No. 1 first baseman, steady on the defense and a threat every time he steps to the plate.

Yet such are the vagaries of World Series fortune that his rival on the Giants, Long John McCarthy, might steal the show. McCarthy's comeback is one of the most startling of the Giants' late season surge. In midyear he was replaced by Sam Leslie and generally labelled by sports writers as a "$40,000 bust." Leslie's hand injury gave McCarthy another chance. The former Chicago sandlot star seized it with both hands. He has made plays that remind fans of the defensive skill of Bill Terry himself and his bat, singing a .340 tune for the past month, has been potent.

McCarthy, in short, is the type who might well be cast in the hero's role for a club that has been demonstrating for weeks that anything can happen, particularly the unexpected.

Conceding Gehrig's marked advantages on form, however, the fact rmains that the rest of the Giants' infield has a decided edge, both offensively and defensively.

The Yankees will go into the series with the same combination they used last year, whereas the Giants have two conspicuous replacements, with McCarthy in the spot where Terry hobbled through the 1936 series, on a bad knee, and Mel Ott, a newcomer at third base. Travis Jackson closed his big league playing career at third in the last World Series. Lou Chiozza was obtained during the winter from the Phillies to fill the gap but the pennant drive of the Giants dates from the shift of Ott from rightfield to third base.

Rated off little more than a month's play, Ott comes close to being the best third sacker in the majors. His Yankee rival, Robert (Red) Rolfe has a fielding edge, on paper, but he hasn't Ott's flair on the defense nor the Giant star's power at the plate. Ott's .289 average doesn't give a correct picture. It's the product of a prolonged slump from which the little slugger didn't emerge until August.

The keystone combination of Dick Bartell and Burgess Whitehead is something for Giant rooters to cheer about. If it isn't the best defensive duo in either league it will do until another comes along to prove to the contrary. It outshines the Yankee pair, Frankie Crosetti and Tony Lazzeri. As a double play manipulator the Giant combination is far in front.

Lazzeri is one of the smartest infielders in baseball, but he is winding up his career in the big show this year, on his own admission. He can't begin to cover the ground that Whitehead does and though he carries much more power in his bat, his stickwork hasn't been as useful as his rival's. Don Heffner, a slick fielder, is Lazzeri's understudy.

Bartell, on this year's record, excels Crosetti in every vital department of play. The Giant shortstop has a trolley wire arm, generally is at his best under pressure and is enjoying a .300 season with his bat.

If there is need for replacements the Giants have the old slogan man, Blondy Ryan, as well as Chiozza, but nothing short of serious mishap will afford either a chance to do infield duty. The Giants have no worries about their first line of defense.

Loyola Eleven Scheduled to Arrive Today

The second half of tomorrow's football attraction at Brookland, Loyola of the South, is scheduled to arrive in Washington early this morning, and after a brief bit of sightseeing repair to the scene of battle for a final pregame workout.

Thirty-two strong, the Wolfpack is coming to town confident of returning with their second consecutive victory over the Cardinals, who suffered a surprising 6-0 defeat last year. This is Loyola's first season under the tutelage of "Moon" Mullins, one of the late Knute Rockne's last great fullbacks, and the team displayed a potent scoring punch last week in bowling over Spring Hill, 19-0.

Meanwhile Catholic University is beginning to wonder what became of "Dixie" Walker, industrious quarterback, who returned home because of illness in his family and has not been heard from since. Walker's loss will be a serious blow to the Cardinals' hopes for a good year.

"Dutch" Bergman yesterday intimated that he will depend on Johnny Fiorellino, southpaw passer, for yardage in tomorrow's game. The olive-skinned lad is understudying Quarterback Bud Munhall, but is certain to play much of the game. He is at his best on long distance pegs, and Bergman has built several plays of this character to utilize his talent.

Drive Launched To Better Heating In 7 D. C. Schools

A drive to repair boilers in the seven District schools still without heat was launched yesterday after two classes at the Petworth School had been dismissed because of frigid conditions.

Following a protest by mothers of Petworth School children, William A. Draper, District repair shop chief, said an attempt would be made to repair all defective heating apparatus within a week.

Petworth pupils were dismissed yesterday morning when room temperatures fell below 64 degrees minimum allowed by District regulations.

Delay in fixing the heating equipment was the result of the more comprehensive boiler inspection system begun this summer, Draper explained. Schools still without heat are Barrville, Birney, Cranch, Powell Junior High, Petworth, Webster and Stevens. Boilers in these schools, Draper said, are from 20 to 40 years old.

Ickes Sees Power Fund Shortage

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes intimated yesterday separate legislation might be necessary to complete allotment of funds for South Carolina's $37,500,000 Santee-Cooper Public Works power project.

Expressing doubt PWA's reserve fund would be large enough for a project of Santee-Cooper's size, Ickes said additional funds could be had by a separate appropriation. The Secretary's comment was made in connection with President Roosevelt's recent statement that no more PWA funds were available.

Korman Named Police Court Aide

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal stated yesterday that none of his assistants will be placed in charge of the legal staff at police court after the Commissioners, upon his recommendation, had appointed Milton D. Korman, of Washington, an assistant corporation counsel.

Korman, a protege of Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, will be assigned to the police court staff as successor to Rice Hooe, who resigned recently. Hooe was in charge of the corporation counsel's assistants at the court.

Korman, 32 years old, is a native of Washington, and was educated at Central High School, George Washington University, and Georgetown Law School.

Tax Ruling Frees Joint Property

Temporary regulations governing the new estate and inheritance taxes were adopted yesterday by the District Commissioners in order to eliminate a legal difficulty that has tied up certain joint estates.

Upon recommendation of Jo V. Morgan, special assistant corporation counsel, the commissioners ruled that joint bank deposits and other joint assets are not to be construed as assets of the estate of the deceased member.

Underwriters Announce New Business Year

By Thomas M. Cahill.

An interesting series of meetings for the new business year of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association will open Monday, in the Willard Hotel's large ball room, when that organization holds the first luncheon of the fall, under the leadership of Paul H. Primm, newly elected president.

Programs for the monthly meetings have been arranged during the summer and are planned to cover important questions that the public is asking life insurance companies and life insurance men and women in the field.

At Monday's session the association will hear O. J. Arnold, president of Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., of Minneapolis, discuss the subject, "Social Security Through Life Insurance." Mr. Arnold, a director of the United States Chamber of Commerce and chairman of its insurance committee, is also chairman of the board of directors of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, of Hartford, Conn., and a director of the American College of Life Underwriters, Philadelphia. These positions indicate his experience and ability to discuss "social security." One of the outstanding speakers at the convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters in Denver, Mr. Arnold' address here is anticipated as an inspirational beginning of the series.

Committees Apointed.

Mrs. Helen R. Sharpe, Bank of Commerce & Savings, chairman of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, has announced the following committees to promote the work of the group during its new administrative year.

Standardized Safe Deposit Practices—J. O. Lehmann, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, chairman; H. W. Ireland, American Security & Trust Co.; C. A. Ashton, Munsey Trust Co.; James E. Woltz, National Metropolitan Bank; Albert E. Fisher, Riggs National Bank.

Publicity and Education—Miss Eva Ricker, Riggs National Bank, chairman; A. P. Miller, Liberty National Bank; Mrs. Allene Weatherly, Bank of Commerce & Savings; John M. Boteler, National Savings & Trust Co.; Fred S. Beyer, Second National Bank; Miss Elizabeth Churchill, Union Trust Co.

Program—J. S. Cheney, American Security & Trust Co.; chairman; Robert Morgan, McLachler Banking Corporation; Mrs. Kathryn S. Bowers, Hamilton National Bank; W. Clarence Miller, National Bank of Washington; E. Percival Wilson, National Savings & Trust Co.; William H. Harper, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Mrs. D. N. de Lozier, Second National Bank.

Investment Bankers.

Y. E. Booker, chief executive of the investment banking firm bearing his name, will head the local delegation to the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association to be held at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., November 3 to 7. Mr. Booker is a member of the board of governors of the association.

In its border aspects, this year's program will adhere closely to the type that has made meetings so successful in the past and will be designed primarily to outline and clarify numerous problems confronting members of the profession and their clientele. Emphasis is placed upon the forum sessions where open and informal discussions will be held. There will be five forums in the program which is being prepared, and which will include prominent speakers.

A delegation of investment bankers will attend the annual fall meeting of the southeastern group of the Investment Bankers Association, at the Merchants Club, in Baltimore, today. Robert S. Belknap, of Alexander Brown & Sons, Baltimore, has been named chairman of the group to succeed John Redmond, jr., of that city.

Other nominations are: C. Prevost Boyce, Baltimore, vice president; R. S. Dickson, Charlotte, N. C., vice chairman; William H. Price 3rd, Baltimore, secretary treasurer; J. Elliott Irvine, Baltimore; Y. E. Booker, Washington, D. C.; John C. Legg, jr., and John C. Hagen, Baltimore, members of the executive committee. Wallace H. Fulton, director, Investment Bankers Conference, Inc., Washington, will be the guest speaker.

An interesting program for the fall meeting of the new administrative year of the District of Columbia Bankers Association is being arranged by Hilleary G. Hoskinson, a vice president of Riggs National Bank and first vice president of the bankers group. The meeting is scheduled for October 18, at 4 p. m., in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co. There will be a guest speaker.

Two hundred and sixty-four junior banking men and women have already enrolled in this year's first semester classes of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. Enrollments in two more classes are expected to bring this number to 285, (total of last year's enrollment), or even higher.

New York, Sept. 30.—Financial markets were inclined to settle into ruts. Stocks did well at the start, but grew a little sulky and hung back in the later trading, closing irregularly on a turnover of around 1,000,000 shores, the smallest since last Thursday. Government bonds were firm. French spot francs were a little harder and futures were steadier.

Developments of the day seemed to have little influence on stocks. Prices hardened and softened over a narrow range largely in response to the hourly changes in short turn trading sentiment. Reports were received of the blowing out of blast furnaces by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation in the Pittsburgh district, of further consideration of the railroad wage matter, and hints were given that President Roosevelt has not given up the idea of a special session of Congress.

Tax Outlook.

The matter of a special session probably did something to hold down sentiment on the market, for Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau took the opportunity to say that nothing heretofore done or promised would prevent a program of higher taxation to be presented to the next Congress. Higher taxes nevertheless scarcely can come as a surprise to any one; they might as well be regarded as inevitable, although not by any means as necessarily bringing the budget into balance.

Retail Trade.

Metal markets may have gained some reassurance from the fractional rise in copper, after two 1-cent-a-pound reductions announced by the customs smelters in the last two days. The latest cut, which was followed by producers, suggests that the fall has gone as far as it will, for a while at least, and therefore may result in a large buying movement. Pessimists on the state of retail trade also were given something to cheer them in the report for this dsitrict by the Federal Reserve Bank on department store sales. Sales were found to have been 2 per cent above a year ago, with the usual rise from August. Chain store sales, on the other hand, were somewhat lower than last year, but wholesale trade rose. Taking into consideration the higher price levels it is apparent that the volume of retail trade has fallen, but not enough to warrant the pessimism found in some quarters.

Early Prices Best.

Most stocks were fractionally higher at the opening, but declines were more numerous than they were later until the market tired around the lunch hour. Copper shares were firm throughout on the sudden reversal in the price for the metal. Prices ran up 1 to 2 points in the copper group. Steel managed to run up a fraction to above 83, but that early price was not held.

In the late trading prices turned easier and most of the average gains of 1 to 2 points during the happiest periods of the day were given up. Resistance stiffened when prices approached the previous closing levels. Rails retreated from their advanced positions occupied during the morning.

A long list of preferred stocks climbed 1 to 4 points. American Can recrossed par for a rise of more than 3 points. Farm implements hardened 1 to 4 points. Radio replaced Steel as the leading active issue. It had a turnover of more than 40,000 shares in the first three hours at higher prices.

September Trading.

Stock trading volume in September for the 25 trading sessions was slightly in excess of 34,000,000 shares, the largest since April. It compares with 17,212,000 shares for August, and with 30,872,000 shares for September of last year. The biggest day this month was the thirteenth, with 2,561,000 shares. Sales of 690,000 shares on the third were the smallest. Sales exceeded 2,000,000 shares on five days and 1,000,000 shares on six days. On two Saturday sessions—the eleventh and twenty-fifth—sales volume exceeded 1,000,000 shares each.

Concentration.

The concentration of stock trading in September is shown by the fact that the 15 most active stocks made up 25 per cent of total sales. United States Steel led with a turnover of more than 1,000,000 shares, the largest for that stock during any month since July, 1933, when the first flush of inflation under the New Deal was on. Radio came next with more than 800,000 shares. Others were General Motors, 650,000; New York Central, 580,000; Anaconda, 560,000; Republic Steel, 550,00; Paramount, 475,000; Chrysler, 450,000; Commonwealth & Southern, 530,000; International Nickel, 420,000; Socony-Vacuum, 400,000; General Electric, 375,000.

How Stocks Acted.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The French franc improved slightly yesterday as Paris advices carried rumors of prospective political alignments to bolster the fiscal position.

In spot transactions the unit rose .00⅝ of a cent at 3.42⅝ cents. There was some narrowing of discounts on forward francs. Budgetary proposals announced by Finance Minister Bonnet were studied closely in foreign exchange circles. The firmer tone of the currency was attributed to official support.

Sterling held to a narrow range, remaining about even with Wednesday's final rate at $4.95⅛. The belga declined a fraction to 16.84 cents, accompanied by banking gossip suggesting renewal of the flow of Belgian gold to New York.

In Paris the dollar closed at 3.424 cents to the franc, compared with the New York overnight of 3.417 cents. The dollar closed in London at 4.94⅞ to the pound, against the New York overnight of 4.95⅛.

Export Buying Fails to Rally Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30—Despite the largest export business in United States wheat this season, wheat prices here turned downward late today and ended with net losses all around.

A sharp break in quotations on October delivery of wheat at Winnipeg, together with an increase of hedging and spec lative selling pressure in the corn market did much to pull Chicago wheat values lower at the last.

Terry and the Pirates

Who is his mysterious captor? Is it Sandhurst or an unsuspected enemy? Can the three victims escape? What has happened to Normandie? Continue the story on this page today.

Bob Burns Says—

Nervous, excitable people should always have a good, steady, easy-going friend to call on when their nerves get overwrought. That's the reason my Uncle Orchie made such a good dentist. People's nerves are usually on edge anyhow when they go to a dentist's office and Uncle Orchie had such a nice, quiet, easy way about him that he put the patient at ease right away.

One day a man came ravin' into his office, all wild-eyed and says, "For goodness sakes, yank this tooth out—it's killin' me!" Uncle Orchie says, "Well, now, take it easy. Sit there and I'll take a look at it." So when Uncle Orchie looked at the tooth, he says, "Yes, that's right—it'll have'ta come out." So he turned to his boy and says, "Hod, go over to the house and tell your mama if she's through takin' up the carpets, I'd like to have my forceps."
